Edwards,Martín Fiszbein,Gary D. Libecap,2020 We examine the origins persistence and economic consequences of institutional structures of agricultural production We compare farms in the Argentine Pampas and US Midwest regions of similar potential input and output mixes The focus is on 1910 1914 during the international grain trade boom and when census data are available The Midwest was characterized by small farms and family labor Land was a commercial asset and traded routinely The Pampas was characterized by large landholdings and use of external labor Land was a source of status and held across generations Status attributes could not be easily monetized for trade reducing market exchange limiting entry and hindering farm restructuring Differing land property rights followed from English and Spanish colonial and post independence policies Geo climatic factors cannot explain dissimilarities in farm sizes tenancy and output mixes suggesting institutional constraints Midwest farmers also were more responsive to exogenous signals There is evidence of moral hazard on Pampas farms Conjectures on long term development are provided Colonial Agriculture for Africans Dickson A. Mungazi,L. Kay Walker,1998 The massive starvation that African nations experience from time to time occurs as evidenced by this study because of agricultural and educational policies formulated and implemented by the colonial governments during the nineteenth and half of the twentieth century A study of any aspect of any colonial period reveals some disturbing realities that can be comprehended only in retrospect The policy contrary to the colonial government s that Emory D Alvord formulated and pursued regarding the agricultural development for Africans in colonial Zimbabwe from 1926 to 1950 is examined The authors discuss the political environment that influenced his effort and the problems that he encountered

The Second Colonial Occupation Bekeh Utietiang Ukelina,2017-07-28 In this insightful book development historian Bekeh Utietiang Ukelina addresses the crisis of development in Africa by locating it in its colonial historical past Using Nigeria as a case study he argues that the nature and practice of British colonialism in this colony created social and economic deficiencies that have left a legacy of underdevelopment Ukelina outlines the processes that led to the 1945 Nigerian Development Plan and the evolution of colonial agricultural policy and practices in Nigeria He argues that a few key factors led to the failure of development in the late colonial period the imperial and neocolonial imperative to exploit African resources and people poor planning as a result of this imperative and the racial ideologies of the colonial state that resulted in a total rejection of local African experience and knowledge in favor of Western experts The Second Colonial Occupation uncovers and analyzes the short and long term impact of colonialism It reveals that though colonial rule was promoted as a benevolent mission at heart it was a system that guaranteed that Africans continuously paid for their own exploitation Ukelina argues that postcolonial Africa will continue to face development challenges unless it breaks free from the intellectual relics of colonial rule and the economic shackles of neocolonialism

Colonial Green Revolution? John D. Overton,John Overton,1994 The main aim of this book is to investigate the relationship between colonialism and agricultural development It focuses on Malaysia and rice production and investigates why a green revolution did not take place in colonial times when in several ways the preconditions were laid for this It is shown that colonial agricultural policy was based on a low cost low tech model of rural development which nevertheless offered a more sustainable approach than methods employed subsequently to achieve advances in grain production The book draws on a wide variety of archival data and is aimed at social scientists concerned with colonial history peasant transformations and agricultural change Manufacturing Malcolm Keir,1928 Food Insecurity and Revolution in the Middle East and North Africa Habib Ayebe, Ray Bush,2019-09-30 Food Insecurity and Revolution in the Middle East and North Africa studies the political economy of agrarian transformation in the eponymous regions Examining Egypt and Tunisia in detail as case studies it critiques the dominant tropes of food security offered by the international financial institutions and promotes the importance of small scale family farming in developing sustainable food sovereignty Egypt and Tunisia are located in the context of the broader Middle East and broader processes of war environmental transformation and economic reform The book contributes to uncovering the historical backdrop and contemporary pressures in the Middle East and North Africa for the uprisings of 2010 and 2011 It also explores the continued failure of post uprising counter revolutionary governments to directly address issues of rural development that put the position and role of small farmers centre stage
