Colonial Habits:

Colonial Habits Kathryn Burns, 2012-06 In Colonial Habits Kathryn Burns transforms our view of nuns as marginal recluses making them central actors on the colonial stage Beginning with the 1558 founding of South America's first convent Burns shows that nuns in Cuzco played a vital part in subjugating Incas creating a creole elite and reproducing an Andean colonial order in which economic and spiritual interests were inextricably fused Based on unprecedented archival research Colonial Habits demonstrates how nuns became leading guarantors of their city's social order by making loans managing property containing unruly women and raising girls Coining the phrase spiritual economy to analyze the intricate investments and relationships that enabled Cuzco's convents and their backers to thrive Burns explains how by the late 1700s this economy had faltered badly making convents an emblem of decay and a focal point for intense criticism of a failing colonial regime By the nineteenth century the nuns had retreated from their previous roles marginalized in the construction of a new republican order Providing insight that can be extended well outside the Andes to the relationships articulated by convents across much of Europe the Americas and beyond Colonial Habits will engage those interested in early modern economics Latin American studies women in religion and the history of gender class and race

Women and Religion in the Atlantic Age, 1550-1900 Emily Clark, 2016-02-11 Bringing the study of early modern Christianity into dialogue with Atlantic history this collection provides a longue durée investigation of women and religion within a transatlantic context Taking as its starting point the work of Natalie Zemon Davis on the effects of confessional difference among women in the age of religious reformations the volume expands the focus to broader temporal and geographic boundaries The result is a series of essays examining the effects of religious reform and revival among women in the wider Atlantic world of Europe the Americas and West Africa from 1550 to 1850 Taken collectively the essays in this volume chart the extended impact of confessional divergence on women over time and space and uncover a web of transatlantic religious interaction that significantly enriches our understanding of the unfolding of the Atlantic World Divided into three sections the volume begins with an exploration of Old World Reforms looking afresh at the impact of confessional change in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries upon the lives of European women Part two takes this forward tracing the adaptation of European religious forms within Africa and the Americas The third and final section explores the multifarious faces of the revival that inspired the nineteenth century missionary movement on both sides of the Atlantic Collectively the essays underline the extent to which the development of the Atlantic World created a space within which an unprecedented series of juxtapositions collisions and collusions among religious traditions and practitioners took place These demonstrate how the religious history of Europe the Americas and Africa became intertwined earlier and more deeply than much scholarship suggests and highlight the dynamic nature of transatlantic cross fertilization and influence
