Colour in the Flower Garden (Classic Reprint) Gertrude

Jekyll, 2016-09-11 Excerpt from Colour in the Flower Garden I am strongly of opinion that the possession of a quantity of plants however good the plants may be themselves and however ample their number does not make a garden it only makes a collection Having got the plants the great thing is to use them with careful selection and definite intention Merely having them or having them planted unassorted in garden Spaces is only like having a box of paints from the best colourman or to go one step further it is like having portions of these paints set out upon a palette This does not constitute a picture and it seems to me that the duty we owe to our gardens and to our own bettering in our gardens is so to use the plants that they shall form beautiful pictures and that while delighting our eyes they should be always training those eyes to a more exalted criticism to a state of mind and artistic conscience that will not tolerate bad or careless combination or any sort of misuse of plants but in which it becomes a point of honour to be always striving for the best It is just in the way it is done that lies the whole difference between commonplace gardening and gardening that may rightly claim to rank as a fine art Given the same space of ground and the same material they may either be fashioned into a dream of beauty a place of perfect rest and refreshment of mind and body a series of soul satisfying pictures a treasure of well set jewels or they may be so misused that everything is jarring and displeasing To learn how to perceive the difference and how to do right is to apprehend gardening as a fine art In practice it is to place every plant or group of plants with such thoughtful care and definite intention that they shall form apart of a harmonious whole and that successive portions or in some cases even single details shall show a series of pictures It is so to regulate the trees and undergrowth of the wood that their lines and masses come into beautiful form and harmonious proportion it is to be always watching noting and doing and putting oneself meanwhile into closest acquaintance and sympathy with the growing things About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Colour Schemes for the Flower Garden, 1919 Colour in the Flower Garden - Scholar's Choice Edition Gertrude Jekyll, 2015-02-08 This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it This work was
