Come, Armageddon Clint Margrave, 2004-01-01      Little Armageddon Gregory Fraser, 2021-01-15 It is our everyday explorations the small explosions within life family and ordinary survival that make up Gregory Fraser's fourth collection of poetry Little Armageddon Fraser writes at eye level detailing the experiences of fatherhood love and the quiet of daily life poised at the brink of abrupt upheaval These poems are an exercise in precision and reflection Free verse and prose show readers the life within the landscape In My Daughter and the Lizard the speaker reflects on grace meditating on the reptile his child is inspecting I scissor jab three holes through the lid of a Mason jar and tell her to be gentle It's a living thing I say not a toy We are how we live These poems balance imagination and truth telling with rich verse that brings the reader's ear closer to the quiet and how intense it truly is      Songs of Armageddon and Other Poems George Sylvester Viereck, 1995 thrives there realizations dwell to make a person see through self introspection that self conflicting thoughts hold their basis in the voices we hear Voice 1 Is our own voice produced by our vocal chord The voice we use to express ourselves to others Voice 2 Is that which we hear from others from your ancestors They all sound different and are recorded thus in our memory as we remember the words we heard a long time ago and apply them in changing circumstances of our lives even many years after the actual verbalization sometimes we hold these voices of those other people within ourselves for life Voice 3 Is that of God the Universe or Nature The divine that resides within every person It is the voice which guides us makes us define the right from the wrong guards and warns us whenever we are in danger It is the voice that knows it is pure and it is omniscient thus it is also the voice that gospels intuitions Self conflicting thoughts are born whenever one of the these voices are in opposition to the others Even the most qualified individual ends up leading a docile wasteful life when for example voice of the divine and the others oppose their own On the contrary the most useless illiterate person on the face of the planet can become a king when all the three voices in them are in harmony and in sync with one another In India professional salutation is done with Namaste and the younger generation bow down and take the blessings of their elders to enforce this power of voices to generate productivity and ensure harmony between everybody in turn making sure all are free from self conflicting thoughts
