Kümin,2014-05-22 The seventeenth and eighteenth centuries form a very distinctive period in European food history This was a time when enduring feudal constraints in some areas contrasted with widening geographical horizons and the emergence of a consumer society While cereal based diets and small scale trade continued to be the mainstay of the general population elite tastes shifted from Renaissance opulence toward the greater simplicity and elegance of dining la fran aise At the same time growing spatial mobility and urbanization boosted the demand for professional cooking and commercial catering An unprecedented wealth of artistic literary and medical discourses on food and drink allows fascinating insights into contemporary responses to these transformations A Cultural History of Food in the Early Modern Age presents an overview of the period with essays on food production food systems food security safety and crises food and politics eating out professional cooking kitchens and service work family and domesticity body and soul representations of food and developments in food production and consumption globally Recipes on the Move in Early Modern England and

British North America Hillary Nunn,2025-10-01 Using feminist and ecocritical approaches alongside recent historical work on early modern trade and commerce this volume focuses on early modern manuscripts whose travels can be traced from one location to another It illustrates how recipes came to blend newly encountered ingredients and practices with long established healthcare methods In the process it offers attention to both the English countryside and the American colonies to expand what is often a London centered view of English healthcare Tracing the circulation of women s domestic knowledge and considering the availability of ingredients this work shows how mobility brought new methods and materials to home healthcare which in turn influenced how women and their families envisioned their relationships to their environment their bodies and their nation The English Catalogue of Books ...
