1. Introducing regional competitiveness and development: contemporary theories and perspectives

Robert Huggins and Piers Thompson

1.1 INTRODUCTION

The field of regional development is subject to an ever-increasing multiplicity of concepts and theories seeking to explain uneven development across regional contexts. In particular, economic geographers and spatial economists have rapidly developed the theoretical tools by which to approach such analyses. One concept and theoretical tool that has endured and remained keenly discussed since the 1990s is 'regional competitiveness'. Indeed, the rise of the concept has led to many frameworks and applications emerging and being employed in various contexts. Such variety has been both a blessing and a curse, with the notion of the 'competitiveness of regions' remaining an area of contested theoretical debate, especially arguments concerning the extent to which places actually compete for resources and markets. These debates have evolved as a result of a significant forum of scholarly and practitioner-based research developing in recent years with the aim of theorizing upon and empirically measuring the competitiveness of regions.

Nevertheless, the somewhat disparate and fragmented nature of work on regional competitiveness has led to the lack of a substantive theoretical foundation underpinning the various analyses and measurement methodologies employed. The aim of this volume, therefore, is to take stock of regional competitiveness and complementary concepts as a means of presenting a state-of-the-art discussion of the contemporary theories, perspectives and empirical explanations that help make sense of the sources and determinants of the uneven development across regions. Drawing on an international field of leading scholars (see section 1.9 of this chapter for an outline of the volume), the book is assembled and organized so that readers can first learn of the theoretical underpinnings of regional competitiveness and development theory, before moving on to deeper discussions of key factors and principal elements, the emergence of allied concepts, empirical applications and the policy context.

In order to initially set the scene, this chapter presents a broad overview of the evolution of regional competitiveness thinking, and aims to make clear the connections across a variety of contemporary regional development theories. The chapter firstly introduces the regional competitiveness concept and discusses its close association with schools of endogenous growth and development theory (sections 1.2 and 1.3). Following a discussion of the potential for measuring regional competitiveness (section 1.4), the chapter turns its attention to providing an introduction to some of the contemporary theoretical perspectives on regional development, in particular the idea of regional growth systems (section 1.5) and institutions (section 1.6). Beyond this, section 1.7 introduces 'upstream' behavioural theories of regional development concerning both cultural and psychological

Contemporary Issues In Regional Development Policy Perspectives From:

Contemporary Issues in Regional Development Policy Wilbert Gooneratne, Robert A. Obudho, 1997 This work is about the increasing relevance of a local regional approach to recovery and sustainable growth in Sub Saharan Africa It explores the untapped potentials of such an approach and identifies some of the conditions critical to the realization of this potential

Circular Migration in Zimbabwe & Contemporary Sub-Saharan Africa Deborah Helen Potts, 2010 The World Bank insists that the urban share of sub Saharan Africa's population is rapidly increasing this study shows that in many countries this is no longer true as migration strategies have adapted in response to economic and political change Circular migration whereby rural migrants do not remain permanently in town has particular significance in the academic literature on development and urbanization in Africa often having negative connotations in southern Africanist studies due to its links with an iniquitous migrant labour system Literature on other African regions often views circular migration more positively This book reviews the current evidence about circular migration and urbanization in sub Saharan Africa The author challenges the dominant view that rural urban migration continues unabated and shows that circular migration has continued and has adapted with faster out migration in the face of declining urban economic opportunities The empirical core of the book illustrates these trends through a detailed examination of the case of Zimbabwe based on the author's longstanding research on Harare The political and economic changes in Zimbabwe since the 1980s transformed Harare from one of the best African cities to live in over this period to one of the worst Harare citizens livelihoods exemplify in microcosm the central theme of the book the re invention of circulation and rural urban links in response to economic change Deborah Potts is a Senior Lecturer in the Geography Department of King's College London She works in the broad research field of urbanization and migration in sub Saharan Africa particularly southern Africa and has conducted research on these themes in Harare in Zimbabwe since 1985 Southern Africa South Africa Botswana Lesotho Swaziland Namibia and Zimbabwe University of Cape Town Press PB

European Regional Development Paweł Churski, Tomasz Herodowicz, Barbara Konecka-Szydłowska, Robert Perdał, 2021-11-18 This book offers a comprehensive overview of contemporary issues of regional development It places particular emphasis on its socio economic and socio political determinants which accompany the problem of existing and ever widening differences in the level of regional development in various parts of Europe In order to diagnose the scale of those differences and to indicate the main forces behind the divergence of development the authors propose an original systematisation of regional development factors drawing attention to the need to consider them within the framework of present day socio economic megatrends The proposed approach to the development factors is also used for the author's operationalisation of the concept of territorial capital which is at the centre of regional place based policy The wide spatial aspect of the analysis national and local and its extensive temporal scope 2004-2019 yields unique results and creates an important element of added value for this book which shows the regularities of the process of regional development in Europe at three spatial levels pan European national and intra regional Furthermore it indicates the challenges faced by regionalists who attempt to carry out research on different territorial levels with a diverse number of units 205 EU regions 16 Polish voivodeships 2 478 Polish local units and extended observation periods 2004 2017 The solutions proposed by the authors who show the potential of overcoming the barriers resulting from limited access to complete and comparable statistical data series should be inspiring for many researchers The unique results of direct research carried out on a large sample of respondents and entrepreneurs via diverse field research techniques constitute a valuable source of information on local conditions that impact contemporary development processes in less developed regions Their value is even greater because they were carried out in a unique laboratory created by the authors for testing the regularity of formation and impact of socio economic development factors in various locally determined conditions of this process It consists of purposefully selected test units LAU2 Located in a less developed region they represent all growth types and functional test units identified in the course of the research Consequently the results obtained may be generalised and applied to other areas showing similar features of territorial capital The monograph is addressed primarily to a wide group of regionalists connected with economic and social sciences as well as to practitioners involved in the implementation of development policies at various levels

Regional Development and Its Spatial Structure Dadao Lu, 2024-02-20 This book describes the progress and prominent theories of regional development research in the past decades especially in the past decade discusses the industrial structure spatial structure resources and environment as well as a series of practical issues and reveals the general characteristics of spatial structure evolution in the process of regional development The research on the issues of regional development has become the frontier of relevant disciplines since the 1950s and much progress has been made in the process of solving practical problems in social and economic development This book provides an in depth and systematic demonstration of the point axis system theory of regional exploitation and development as well as the T shaped structure of China s regional economic action in theory and practice and discusses the impact of location differential rent restricted accessibility technological innovation etc on regional development theoretically This book is used as a reference for planning scientific research and teaching personnel in territorial expansion regional economy human geography etc

Farewell to Farms Deborah Fahy Bryceson, Vali Jamal, 2019-05-23 First published in 1997 this volume asks whether Africa s future is necessarily rooted in peasant agriculture The title of this book Farewell to Farms is deliberately intended to challenge the widely held view that Africa is the world s reserve for peasant farming African rural populations are themselves moving away from a reliance on agriculture De agrarianisation takes the form of urban migration as well as the expansion of non agricultural activities in rural areas providing new income sources occupations and social identities for rural dwellers Using recent continent wide case study evidence the authors assess the impact of de agrarianisation on household welfare business performance and national development Their findings which reveal new economic trajectories and social patterns emerging from a period of accelerated change call into question assumptions about Africa's future place in the world division of labour

Small African Towns Poul Ove Pedersen, 2019-07-23 First published in 1997 this study sees the small enterprise as performing specific tasks within the larger societal system of production and distribution and as being shaped and adapted to the specific social and economic locally specific environment of which it is a part Research was focused on fieldwork in Kenya Tanzania Uganda Zimbabwe and Bangladesh examining rural small towns serving rural hinterlands Areas explored include the building sector in Zimbabwean district service centres the building sector in small Tanzanian towns small enterprises and the public sector in Kenya and Bangladesh and the structure of small scale grain marketing in a small Ugandan town
