

TYPES OF CRITICISM IN DIFFERENT CONTEXTS

Criticism can be understood as the analysis, evaluation, or interpretation of a work of art, literature, music, or any other subject. In different fields, there are various types of criticism, each with its own focus, methodology, and perspective. Below are some of the most prominent "types of criticism", particularly in the context of literature, art, and cultural studies:

### 1. "Literary Criticism"

Literary criticism involves the analysis, interpretation, and evaluation of literature, including novels, poetry, short stories, plays, and other written works. The different schools of literary criticism can offer various ways of reading and understanding a text. Some key types of literary criticism include:

- "Formalism/New Criticism": Focuses on the text itself—its form, structure, language, and literary devices—without considering external factors like the author's background or historical context. Formalists believe that the meaning and value of a work are inherent in its content and structure.
  - Example: Analyzing the use of metaphor in a poem, or studying the symbolism in a novel.
- "Historical/Biographical Criticism": Considers the historical and biographical context in which a work was written. This type of criticism looks at the author's life, the time period, and the culture to better understand the work's meaning.
  - Example: Understanding the impact of Shakespeare's personal life on the themes in "Hamlet".
- "Marxist Criticism": Examines literature in terms of class struggle, economic power, and social inequality. Marxist critics focus on the way literature reflects or challenges social and economic structures.
  - Example: Analyzing "The Great Gatsby" to explore themes of wealth, class, and social mobility in America.
- "Feminist Criticism": Focuses on the representation of gender and examines how literature reflects or challenges traditional gender roles. It also looks at the ways in which women's experiences are portrayed.
  - Example: Analyzing "The Scarlet Letter" to explore the oppression of women in Puritan society.
- "Psychoanalytic Criticism": Uses the theories of Sigmund Freud and other psychoanalysts to interpret characters' motivations, desires, and psychological states. This type of criticism looks at unconscious drives and conflicts in literature.
  - Example: Interpreting Hamlet's actions in the context of Freudian theory, such as the Oedipus complex.
- "Postcolonial Criticism": Focuses on the effects of colonialism and imperialism on literature and culture. Postcolonial critics analyze how colonial powers and their aftermath are represented in literature.
  - Example: Analyzing "Things Fall Apart" by Chinua Achebe in terms of colonial domination and resistance.
