

Different Types of Birth Control Methods

This comprehensive guide provides an in-depth comparison of the various types of birth control methods available, helping individuals make informed decisions about their reproductive health. Around 99% of sexually active women in the United States have used at least one form of contraception during their lifetime.

Method	Effectiveness*	Description
Intrauterine Devices (IUDs)	99%	Intrauterine devices (IUDs) are a long-acting reversible contraception method, lasting for up to 10 years. The copper-coated IUD implanted into the uterus prevents pregnancy by not allowing the sperm to fertilize the egg.
Birth Control Pill	99%	Contains hormones that prevent pregnancy by keeping a woman's body from releasing an egg each month.
Emergency Contraception (EC)	95%	Emergency contraception (EC) can prevent pregnancy if taken within 24 hours of a failed contraceptive or unprotected sex.
Male Condoms	85%	Male condoms are made of latex or polyurethane (plastic) and are worn externally on the penis when erect.
Female Condoms	79%	Female condoms are placed internally inside of the vagina, somewhat like a diaphragm, to hold the condom in place.
Fertility Awareness	76-88%	Fertility awareness methods include tracking menstrual cycles and monitoring basal body temperature in order to prevent pregnancy.

*Effectiveness of contraceptive methods are based on the individual's proper and typical use.
