CRO - Contract Research Organization: How Drug Research is Evolving Jakob

Miera, 2014-02-01 This book deals in general with mergers acquisitions in the CRO industry and more specifically with reasons for M A success factors during the M A process and why M A can fail in the Contract Research Organization industry The pharmaceutical industry faces increasing obstacles in respect to the development and introduction of new medications That has to do with stricter requirements for admission and sharper controls by authorities Today the research and development of a new drug can easily consume more than 800 million and lasting between 10 and 15 years Due to these facts pharmaceutical companies are looking for an alternative in the drug development process A popular alternative is the outsourcing or in house working with Contract Research Organizations CRO CRO are specialized in coordination and monitoring of drug development activities The size of the CRO market in 2012 was around 32 billion and had an estimated market growth of around 9 12% for 2013 Increased outsourcing and allocation of R D money towards CRO reflects a driving force for prospective growth Contract Research Organizations consider mergers acquisitions as a vital solution to achieve their objectives

Jakob Miera,2013-10-10 Master s Thesis from the year 2013 in the subject Business economics Business Management Corporate Governance grade 1 0 language English abstract This thesis deals in general with mergers acquisitions in the CRO industry and more specifically with reasons for M A success factors during the M A process and why M A can fail in the Contract Research Organization industry The pharmaceutical industry faces increasing obstacles in respect to the development and introduction of new medications That has to do with stricter requirements for admission and sharper controls by authorities Today the research and development of a new drug can easily consume more than 800 million and lasting between 10 and 15 years Due to these admission money and time pressures pharmaceutical companies are looking for an alternative in the drug development process A very popular alternative is the outsourcing or in house working with Contract Research Organizations CRO Contract Research Organizations are specialized in coordination and monitoring of drug development activities Due to their focus they often offer a more sophisticated and faster process Demographic changes chronic diseases like cancer and diabetes and completely new cluster of symptoms demand new therapeutically treatments The size of the CRO market in 2012 was around 32 billion and had an estimated market growth of around 9 12% for 2013 Increased outsourcing and allocation of R D money towards CRO reflects a driving force for prospective growth To benefit from the good industry outlooks CROs adjust their service offerings and strengthen their competitive situation More and more Contract Research Organizations consider mergers acquisitions as a vital solution to achieve their objectives Since couple of years we can observe an increased number of deals Large corporations can close the gaps in the internal service pipeline and smaller firms can use mergers as a financial exit However many M A activities are considered as ineffective and contra productive for the shareholder value either destroy or merely add Depending on the study the numbers of M A failures vary from 50% to even 80% Possible reasons may be not enough integration planning and unrealistic expectations on the cost and time The reality shows that it is not that easy to cut costs by simple combining two departments after a merger or acquisition Additionally we can see that mergers and acquisitions basically not succeed during the actual process      Putting Contract Research Organisations on the Radar SOMO Research,Mariette van Huijstee,Irene Schipper,2011 It is a trend for pharmaceutical companies to contract third parties to conduct their clinical trials in order to test their drugs This trend is referred to as outsourcing and the companies that carry out the work are called contract research organisations CROs In addition clinical trials are increasingly conducted in non traditional trial regions which are mainly low and middle income countries This trend is called offshoring It is widely agreed that the offshoring of clinical trials to these regions should be scrutinised from an ethical perspective because of the vulnerability of the trial population What happens when offshoring is combined with outsourcing Do additional ethical risks arise when clinical trials are contracted out Virtually all pharmaceutical companies publicly declare that they test their drugs in accordance with the highest ethical guidelines such as the Declaration of Helsinki But how do pharmaceutical companies safeguard their commitments when they outsource clinical trial activities to CROs in poor regions These are the central questions that are addressed in this report The report is based on research conducted in India Argentina Brazil and Peru and combined with interviews with pharmaceutical companies and clinical trial experts The research experiences demonstrate that the pharmaceutical sector is generally not transparent which hinders the definitive answering of the research questions Nevertheless the secondary and interview data collected in India Argentina Brazil and Peru provides some valuable insights into the way the CRO sector is developing in these countries Furthermore the report demonstrates that pharmaceutical companies have elaborate systems in place to manage their supply chain responsibility although their functioning can not be independently verified In addition experts authorities and clinical trial practitioners in the selected non traditional trial regions still expressed grave concerns about the implementation of clinical trials in these countries
