Collected Writings on Education and Drama Dorothy Heathcote, 1991-08 What does it mean to be an excellent teacher To Dorothy Heathcote one of this century's most respected educational innovators it means seeing one's pupils as they really are shunning labels and stereotypes It means taking risks putting aside one's comfortable doctrinaire role and participating fully in the learning process Above all it means pushing oneself and one's students to the outer limits of capability often with miraculous results In this lively collection of essays and talks from 1967-80 Heathcote shares the findings of her groundbreaking work in the application of theater techniques and play to classroom teaching She provides a time-tested philosophy on the value of dramatic activity in breaking down barriers and overcoming inertia Her insistence that teachers must step down from their pedestals and immerse themselves in the possibility of the moment makes for magical and challenging reading

Plant Behaviour and Intelligence Anthony Trewavas, 2014-08-21 This book provides a convincing argument for the view that whole cells and whole plants growing in competitive wild conditions show aspects of plant behaviour that can be accurately described as intelligent Trewavas argues that behaviour like intelligence must be assessed within the constraints of the anatomical and physiological framework of the organism in question The fact that plants do not have centralized nervous systems for example does not exclude intelligent behaviour Outside the human dimension culture is thought largely absent and fitness is the biological property of value Thus solving environmental problems that threaten to reduce fitness is another way of viewing intelligent behaviour and has a similar meaning to adaptively variable behaviour The capacity to solve these problems might be considered to vary in different organisms but variation does not mean absence By extending these ideas into a book that allows a critical and amplified discussion the author hopes to raise an awareness of the concept of purposive behaviour in plants

The Arts in Education Les Tickle, 2012-05-04 The arts in education are currently the subject of considerable controversy Some people argue that fostering creativity in schools is important that the arts can provide a substantial contribution to the development of the capacity for creative thought and action and that therefore the arts should be well represented at all levels of the school curriculum Some argue that the education system in fact leaves pupils incomplete stultified and uncreative Others argue that it is the processes of teaching and learning in the arts which are at fault because they are too passive This book surveys the different sides of the debate and goes on to report on original research which examines just how the arts are taught in schools It thereby makes a considerable contribution to the debate which has hitherto been incomplete due to a lack of evidence
