Camera Age Essays On Television:

The Camera Age Michael J. Arlen, 1982      Television Talk Bernard M. Timberg, Bob Erler, 2002-05-15 Flip through the channels at any hour of the day or night and a television talk show is almost certainly on Whether it offers late night entertainment with David Letterman share your pain empathy with Oprah Winfrey trash talk with Jerry Springer or intellectual give and take with Bill Moyers the talk show is one of television s most popular and enduring formats with a history as old as the medium itself Bernard Timberg here offers a comprehensive history of the first fifty years of television talk replete with memorable moments from a wide range of classic talk shows as well as many of today s most popular programs Dividing the history into five eras he shows how the evolution of the television talk show is connected to both broad patterns in American culture and the economic regulatory technological and social history of the broadcasting industry Robert Erler s A Guide to Television Talk complements the text with an extensive who s who listing of important people and programs in the history of television talk      Live Television Drama, 1946-1951 William Hawes, 2015-11-16 The live era or golden age of television drama originating from New York 1946 through 1951 was an exciting time of creative and commercial accomplishment This is a complete history and reference guide to the live dramas that aired during those six years Extensive coverage is given to the NBC anthologies Kraft Television Theatre and Philco Television Playhouse and the CBS anthologies Ford Theater and Studio One as well as to the competitors the 28 new anthologies that appeared in the prime time schedule during 1950 and 1951 Appendices comprehensively list the day by day program logs for BBC CBS and NBC dramas from 1946 through 1951      The Intimate Screen Jason Jacobs, 2000 This book explores the formative period of British television drama concentrating on the years 1936-55 It examines the continuities and changes of early television drama and the impact this had upon the subsequent golden age In particular it questions the caricature of early television drama as photographed stage plays and argues that early television pioneers in fact produced a diverse range of innovative drama productions using a wide range of techniques It also explores the often competing definitions about the form and aesthetics of early television drama both inside and outside the BBC Given the absence of an audio visual record of early television drama the book uses written archive material in order to reconstruct how early television drama looked and how it was considered by producers and critics whilst also offering a critical examination of surviving dramas such as Rudolph Cartier s Nineteen Eighty Four      Television in Society Arthur Asa Berger, 2017-09-29 Is television a cultural wasteland or a medium that has brought people more great art music dance and drama than any previous media How do we study and interpret television What are the effects of television on individuals and society and how do we measure them What is the role of television in our political and economic life Television in Society explores these issues in considering how television both reflects and affects society The book is divided into two sections The first focuses on programming and deals with commercials ceremonial events important series such as MASH and Lou Grant significant programs a production of Brave

New World on television and the images of police on the medium The second part of the book deals with important issues and topics related to the medium the impact of television violence values found on television the impact of television on education the significance of new technological developments and the always thorny issue of freedom of the press The articles are drawn together by a brilliant introductory essay by Arthur Asa Berger who examines television as culture

When Television was Young Paul Rutherford,1990-01-01 A decade after the first Canadian telecasts in September 1952 TV had conquered the country Why was the little screen so enthusiastically welcomed by Canadians Was television in its early years more innovative less commercial and more Canadian than current offerings In this study of what is often called the golden age of television Paul Rutherford has set out to dispel some cherished myths and to resurrect the memory of a noble experiment in the making of Canadian culture He focuses on three key aspects of the story The first is the development of the national service including the critical acclaim won by Radio Canada the struggles of the CBC's English service to provide mass entertainment that could compete with the Hollywood product and the effective challenge of private television to the whole dream of public broadcasting The second deals with the wealth of made in Canada programming available to please and inform viewers even commercials receive close attention Altogether Rutherford argues Canadian programming reflected as well as enhanced the prevailing values and assumptions of the mainstream The final focus is on McLuhan's Question What happens to society when a new medium of communications enters the picture Rutherford's findings cast doubt upon the common presumptions about the awesome power of television Television in Canada Rutherford concludes amounts to a failed revolution It never realized the ambitions of its masters or the fears of its critics Its course was shaped not only by the will of the government the power of commerce and the empire of Hollywood but also by the desires and habits of the viewers
