Camps And Classrooms A Pictorial History Of Frontier College:

Camps and Classrooms James H. Morrison, 1989 Volunteer Work, Informal Learning and Social Action Fiona Duguid, Karsten Mündel, Daniel Schugurensky, 2013-06-12 Since most research on work focuses on paid work and most literature on education concentrates on schools it is not surprising that studies on the relations between work and learning emphasize the relations between paid employment and organized education This unique book deals with an area that has been rarely covered in the literature on work and education the connections between volunteer work and informal learning Through a variety of examples ranging from the Red Cross to teacher labourers from cooperatives to social housing and from participatory democracy to environmental social movements this volume examines the learning dimension of volunteer work in different contexts It also considers the special case of volunteerism among recent immigrants The case studies analyze three basic types of voluntary organizations those providing social services representing local communities and mobilizing for social change The chapters include profiles of the actual work their members do and detailed accounts of the learning practices they are engaged in during their work and the impact of such learning on their personal and professional development The concluding chapter offers a comparative analysis practical recommendations and steps for further research

Home Feelings Jody Mason, 2019-12-18 Literature literacy and citizenship took on new and contested meanings in early twentieth century Canada particularly in frontier work camps In this critical history of the reading camp movement Jody Mason undertakes the first sustained analysis of the organization that became Frontier College in 1919 Employing an interdisciplinary approach Home Feelings investigates how the reading camp movement used fiction poetry songs newspapers magazines school readers and English as a second language and citizenship manuals to encourage ideas of selfhood that were individual and intimate rather than collective Mason shows that British Canadian settlers desire to define themselves in relation to an expanding non British immigrant population as well as a need for immigrant labour put new pressure on the concept of citizenship in the first decades of the twentieth century Through the Frontier College one of the nation's earliest citizenship education programs emerged drawing on literature's potential to nourish home feelings as a means of engaging socialist and communist print cultures and the non British immigrant communities with which these were associated Shifting the focus away from urban centres and postwar state narratives of citizenship Home Feelings tracks the importance of reading projects and conceptions of literacy to the emergence of liberal citizenship in Canada prior to the Second World War

Canada's Global Villagers Ruth Compton Brouwer, 2013-09-27 Established in 1961 the same year as the US Peace Corps Canadian University Service Overseas CUSO became the first Canadian NGO to undertake development work from a secular stance and in a context of rapid decolonization Over the next twenty five years nine thousand volunteers many of them women travelled to over forty countries and became Canada's face in the Global South Drawing on more than one hundred interviews Brouwer tells the story of how these young Canadians responded to the challenges of underdevelopment Moving beyond their initial naiveté they sought to fit into the host communities that had invited them and to provide social services particularly in education Returning home they brought unique skills to the Canadian International Development Agency CIDA and other development organizations and a new level of global consciousness and cultural diversity to Canadian society At a time when many are concerned about Canada's waning reputation for global humanitarianism this book reminds us of an earlier more hopeful time

Canada's Labour Market Training System Bob Barnetson, 2018 How does the current labour market training system function and whose interests does it serve In this introductory textbook Bob Barnetson wades into the debate between workers and employers and governments and economists to investigate the ways in which labour power is produced and reproduced in Canadian society After sifting through the facts and interpretations of social scientists and government policymakers Barnetson interrogates the training system through analysis of the political and economic forces that constitute modern Canada This book not only provides students of Canada's division of labour with a general introduction to the main facets of labour market training including skills development post secondary and community education and workplace training but also encourages students to think critically about the relationship between training systems and the ideologies that support them

The University in Overalls Alfred Fitzpatrick, 1999 Alfred Fitzpatrick's University in Overalls 1920 is reprinted here in its entirety to coincide with Frontier College's one hundredth anniversary in the autumn of 1999 An introduction by Jim Morrison Professor of History at St Mary's University sets the historical context and shows the relevance of Fitzpatrick's cause even today Frontier College is the oldest adult education institution in Canada Founded in 1899 it has brought literacy to the railway camps lumber woods native communities disabled persons and city streets of Canada for almost a century It is a personal statement by its founder Alfred Fitzpatrick who objected to the brutal conditions imposed on a transient peripheral working class who were neither sheltered by the union umbrella nor cared for by paternal management In that time of social ferment for labour ethnic groups and women in a changing Canada Fitzpatrick offered his criticisms and his blueprint for the future in this important book He lambasted the government business and educational institutions for their lack of support for continuing or extension education that went beyond the urban centres and issued a clarion call for the established universities to convert the whole industrial world into a university He tirelessly pursued the ideal of education as a right for all no matter their station in life He challenged Canadian universities to come down from their ivory towers and get their hands dirty figuratively and literally by recognizing the balance of intellectual spiritual and physical qualities every individual embodies There have been many changes in Canadian society since Alfred Fitzpatrick's death over sixty years ago a depression a world war a cold war and now a wired world of computers and global
