Canadas National System Of Innovation:

Canada's National System of Innovation Jorge Niosi, 2000-04-18 Niosi looks at the history of Canada's National System of Innovation NSI particularly during the post war period illuminating the fact that during and after World War II over 30 research universities 150 government laboratories and dozens of government policies aimed at nurturing innovation in private firms academia and government organizations were developed He uses data obtained through questionnaire responses from all the large research and development organizations in Canada to analyse Canada's domestic system of innovation finding increasing collaboration between universities government laboratories and private firms He concludes that Canada has been quite successful in creating a national system of innovation and that the federal government through its initiatives and innovative techniques has been the main factor in the creation of this system

Canada's Regional Innovation System Jorge Niosi, 2005-01-12 While aerospace and aircraft form two poles in Montreal and Toronto Ottawa is Canada's centre for semiconductor and telecommunication innovation Niosi explores how these regional configurations are shaped by national and provincial public policy incentives

How Ottawa Spends, 2010-2011 G. Bruce Doern, Christopher Stoney, 2010-05-01 Informed authors from across Canada examine recession related policy fields including the Canadian banking system new industrial policy pressures such as the automotive industry bailout policies in science technology and innovation and suggestions about how to resist the United States buy America trade policies The chapters in this volume also consider Canada's national regional and political divisiveness the impact of the dynamic Obama Administration on Canadian domestic affairs and governance during a time of minority government

Systems of Innovation Christopher Freeman, 2008 This set of essays by Chris Freeman founder of SPRU and one of the pioneers of innovation studies will be of interest to anyone wanting to gain a deeper understanding of technical and social change

Canadian Intellectual Property G. Bruce Doern, Markus Sharaput, 2000 Defining and regulating intellectual property is a growing industry for information brokers economists and the legal profession While other authors have documented the intellectual property IP market and its laws copyright patents trademarks and licensing Bruce Doern and Markus Sharaput are the first Canadian political scientists to make the leap from simple description to detailed analysis The authors delve into the politics of big business and protectionism lobbies in the healthcare industry regional imbalances equitable dissemination and internal pressures Among the conclusions advanced by Doern and Sharaput is that the main impetus for change in Canada has come ultimately from American corporate and political forces seeking to strengthen IP protection at the expense of IP dissemination The authors show that Canada initially resisted such pressures but ultimately adopted the American influence as being in Canada's interest in the new age of innovation Intellectual property user and dissemination oriented interests are emerging which will likely change the politics of IP in the first decade of the next century Future politics in Canada will indeed shift from its
