Cancer and the Elderly J. M. Vaeth, J. L. Meyer, 1986-01-22

Cancer in the Elderly Ian S. Fentiman, Silvio Monfardini, 1994 The aged population is at the greatest risk for cancer and therefore the disease is becoming any ever increasing problem as human longevity increases Approximately one half of the common cancers occur in patients over 70 Paradoxically however they are excluded from clinical trails on grounds of frailty Such data as are available indicated that elderly cancer patients are often undertreated giving rise to an increased risk of recurrence and death This book considers the relationship between aging and malignancy and brings together a breadth of international clinical research on cancer in the elderly The management of common tumors is examined from the perspective of surgery radiotherapy and medical oncology Additionally the psychosocial problems of the elderly and the specific needs for palliative care in older patients are discussed Cancer in the Elderly makes recommendations for optimal treatment but the authors also identify areas where knowledge is scarce and there is a need for both basic and applied research

Cancer in Elderly People Institute of Medicine, National Cancer Policy Forum, 2007-03-20 A high proportion of cancer occurs primarily in older persons and incidence of the major cancers is greater This combined with the expansion of an aging America is bound to have far reaching effects on the nation s healthcare industry This summary of a workshop held in October 2006 reviews the various important implications of changing demographics and the cancer disease burden in the United States Cancer in the Elderly Rosemary Yancik,1989 Presents data on how age and age related factors influence clinical care of the elderly with cancer Colorectal Cancer in the Elderly Kok-Yang Tan,2012-09-03 As the population ages clinicians are facing an increasing number of elderly patients with colorectal cancer These patients pose unique challenges as they have more comorbidities and lower functional reserves In addition the treatment goals may differ from those in younger patients This book discusses in depth the different aspects of management of colorectal cancer in the elderly After the provision of pertinent background information on the normal physiology of aging screening and diagnosis are discussed Subsequent chapters focus on a range of issues associated with the surgical and perioperative care of these patients and with adjuvant treatment and palliative care Each chapter provides helpful take home messages in bullet point form and numerous informative figures and tables are also included The authors are surgeons physicians anesthetists geriatricians oncologists and allied health professionals with extensive experience in the field Perspectives on Prevention and Treatment of Cancer in the Elderly Rosemary Yancik,1983 Cancer in the Elderly Kathy Redmond,Matti S. Aapro,European School of Oncology,1997 Hardbound This scientific update has been produced as a result of a meeting held in Paris in January 1997 under the auspices of EONS European Oncology Nursing Society and ESO European School of Oncology where experts from medical and nursing fields gave presentations and discussed the problems relating to cancer in the elderly Cancer is predominantly a disease of old age and the incidence of cancer is therefore greater in the older section of the population Yet our knowledge of elderly specific treatment regimens and nursing interventions is poor Epidemiological studies show that the number of elderly people and thus the number of cases of cancer will increase dramatically over the next 25 years This update seeks to examine current knowledge and practice of cancer care for the elderly to highlight inadequacies and to point to ways in which practice may be improved and future research contribute to our understanding of cancer in the eld Ovarian Cancer in Elderly Patients Gilles Freyer,2015-11-20 This practical book provides up to date information on the particular features of ovarian cancer in older women and the best management approach The full range of relevant topics is covered Guidance is provided on geriatric assessment screening pathology diagnosis and follow up The various treatment options are carefully explained covering surgical approaches chemotherapy as a first line strategy the use of anti angiogenic agents and treatment of relapse The cognitive problems that may arise in elderly women during and after treatment of ovarian cancer are documented with advice on response Guidance is also provided on the design of clinical trials and current directions in biological research are reviewed This book will be of value to both practitioners and researchers with an interest in ovarian cancer and the elderly Cancer and Aging Martine Extermann,2013 Outlining the complex interaction between the two phenomena Cancer is clearly an age related disease Recent research in both aging and cancer has demonstrated the complex interaction between the two phenomena This affects a wide spectrum of research and practice anywhere from basic research to health care organization Core examples of these close associations are addressed in this book Starting with basic research the first chapters cover cancer development mTOR inhibition senescent cells altering the tumor microenvironment and immune senescence affecting cancer vaccine response Taking into account the multidisciplinary of geriatric oncology several chapters focus on geriatric and oncologic aspects in patient assessment treatment options nursing and exercise programs The book is rounded off by a discussion on the impact of the metabolic syndrome illustrating the interactions between comorbidity and cancer and a chapter on frailty This book provides the reader with insights that will hopefully foster his or her reflection in their own research and practice to further the development of this most exciting field Given the aging of the population worldwide and the high prevalence of cancer it is essential reading not only for oncologists and geriatricians but for all health practitioners
