Cancer Cervicouterino:

Cervical Cancer Control in Latin America and the Caribbean Angelica Nogueira-Rodrigues, Lucely Cetina-Pérez, Mauricio Maza, 2024-09-27 Worldwide more than half a million women are diagnosed with cervical cancer annually and more than 300 000 die from the disease At least 85% of the deaths occur in low middle income countries LMICs and almost 10% of them in Latin America LATAM and the Caribbean where mortality rates are almost five times higher than in high income areas Infection with high risk subtypes of the Human Papillomavirus HPV is a necessary but not sufficient cause of cervical cancer The natural history of the disease involves persistent high risk HPV infections followed by the development of precancerous cervical lesions and progression to invasive cervical cancer in a process that usually occurs throughout many years The long natural history of the disease provides a window of opportunity for secondary prevention with screening tests which identify women infected with HPV or with cytologic abnormalities indicative of precancerous lesions These lesions can be successfully treated when diagnosed early Besides the existence of a primary infectious etiologic agent allows for primary prevention with prophylactic HPV vaccines capable of reducing the incidence of causative infections Thus cervical cancer is considered a preventable and treatable disease but despite that it continues to be the third cause of cancer in women in the region

Cervical Cancer Jaime G. de la Garza-Salazar, Flavia Morales-Vásquez, Abelardo Meneses-Garcia, 2017-05-26 This book provides readers with a thorough review on cervical cancer treatment guidelines and emerging therapies available for the disease It reviews the epidemiology clinical features diagnosis and medical management of cervical cancer Given the increasing need for preventive strategies treatment optimization with collaborative and integrative work this book improves the actual and integral knowledge in this neoplasm Given the high prevalence of this disease in Latin America this is an important text for clinicians in this region This book outlines the state of the art in cervical cancer treatments and is an indispensable companion for oncologists gynecologists surgeons and medical students

Trends in Cervical Cancer Research Hector T. Varaj, 2007 Cervical cancer is a malignancy of the cervix World wide it is the second most common cancer of women It may present with vaginal bleeding but symptoms may be absent until the cancer is in advanced stages which has made cervical cancer the focus of intense screening efforts utilising the Pap smear Most scientific studies point to human papillomavirus HPV infection which is responsible for 90% of the cases of cervical cancer There are 7 most common types of HPV 16 18 31 33 42 52 and 58 Types 16 and 18 being the most common cause of the cancer Treatment is with surgery including local excision in early stages and chemotherapy and radiotherapy in advanced stages of the disease This book presents cutting edge research in this study of cervical cancer This involves new perspectives in pharmacological treatments anti hormonal agents therapeutic trends for patients nerve sparing treatments antibodies in single chain formats predictors of radiation response lymphatic mapping and docetaxel labelling with radionuclides

Cervical Cancer G. Dallenbach-Hellweg, 2012-12-06 Few subjects in gynecology let alone in medicine in general have provoked such interest or study as cervical cancer Although the wealth of monographs and books published on the subject would seem to obviate the need for more the great advances made in the medical sciences and in gynecological experience and techniques in recent years call for if not require a new book on cervical cancer to bring together the latest ideas and trends in its methods of study diagnosis and treatment Although precancerous lesions have become more common the number of women developing invasive cervical carcinomas has not increased owing in part to programs of patient education in part to screening examinations sponsored by the government The gynecologist is now able to detect with well tried and proved techniques precancerous states of the cervix and to treat these effectively before they become invasive cancer Accordingly recent interests in cervical cancer have shifted from the classic description of invasive carcinoma to newer studies of cause diagnosis therapy and terminology of its precursors As the reader will learn epidemiological studies as guides for the future account for and justifiably so an important part of this book New knowledge about changes in the morphology of cervical carcinoma confirms its dependency on hormonal stimulation Furthermore modern experiences serve to explain which therapy is best Overlapping of concepts and opinions between some chapters could not be avoided

Cervix Cancer Earl A. Surwit, David Alberts, 2012-12-06 Cytological screening for the identification of intraepithelial neoplasia of the cervix as a precursor lesion for cervical cancer has been well established as an effective means for decreasing the incidence of invasive carcinoma Despite these screening efforts carcinoma of the cervix remains one of the more common malignancies in women and it is the leading cause of cancer death in many countries in the western hemisphere It is estimated that in 1986 there will still be 14 000 new cases of invasive cancer with 6 800 deaths in the United States alone Unfortunately many of these patients present with advanced disease posing difficult management problems for the clinician responsible for their care The treatment of early stage invasive carcinoma of the cervix lesions confined to the cervix and vagina remains either radical surgery radical radiation therapy or a combination thereof This approach is extraordinarily effective in the vast majority of patients However there remains a subset of patients with early stage disease that are at high risk for recurrence Dr Kjorstad Chapter 2 has identified adenocarcinomas and adenosquamous carcinomas as having a particularly poor prognosis In addition patients with more than three positive lymph nodes or with involvement of lymph nodes outside of the pelvis have a very poor prognosis He has identified the CEA as a potentially predictive marker for these patients with poor prognosis especially in patients with adenocarcinomas

Cervical Cancer Heather Hasan, 2009-01-15 An introduction to cervical cancer including what it is how it is diagnosed and how to treat and prevent the disease

Cervical Cancer Ruth Dunleavy, 2008-11-20 This is a comprehensive guide to cervical cancer for nurses It is a practically based text for clinical nurses who wish to consolidate and update their knowledge of cervical cancer It is concise containing comprehensive information for general practice together with useful references to facilitate more in depth study Thus it provides an invaluable resource for both the registered nurse with a general interest in cervical cancer and for the nurse specialist working in primary health gynaecology oncology and palliative care As well as containing the essential chapters about the pathophysiology and treatment of cervical abnormalities and cervical cancer the book also addresses specific nursing issues such as sexuality fertility and symptom control Moreover it examines the bigger global picture of the disease Full appreciation of global impact of cervical cancer on women involves an appreciation of the social political and public health aspects of the disease not only in the developed world but also in developing countries Carcinoma of the Cervix E.S. Hafez,J.P. Smith,2012-12-06 Various scientific evaluations taken from these chapters were presented during the international symposium Carcinoma of the Cervix which was held from September 4 7 1980 in Kiawah Island Charleston South Carolina U S A An international selection of research investigators have contributed reviews designed to be informative to medical graduate and post graduate students as well as clinicians oncologists and investigators working in the area of female carcinoma An attempt has been made to provide a total coverage of current progress in carcinoma of the cervix In particular the following major areas are included Epidemiology Histology Histochemistry Ultra structure Physiology Biochemistry Genetics Cytogenetics Immunology Diagnosis and Patho physiology Complications Major changes have occurred in incidence and mortality rates for carcinoma of the cervix in the past decade Mass screening programs and their ability to detect earlier stage diseases have attributed to a reduction in invasive diseases Most cervical cancers could be prevented by an extension of cytologic screening programs in high risk areas Greater resources must be provided to reach high risk areas in order to prevent the occurrence of cervical cancer Como Podemos Prevenir El Cancer Cervicouterino?,2002 A Woman's Disease Ilana Lowy,2011-11-10 Cervical cancer is an emotive disease with multiple connotations It has stood for the horror of cancer the curse of femininity the hope of cutting edge medical technologies and the promise of screening for malignant tumours For a long time this disease was identified with the most dreaded aspects of malignancies prolonged invalidity and chronic pain but also physical degradation shame and social isolation Cervical cancer displayed in parallel the dangers of being a woman In the 20th century innovations initially developed to control cervical cancer radiotherapy and radium therapy exfoliate cytology Pap smear homogenisation of the staging of tumours mass campaigns for an early detection of precancerous lesions of the cervix set standards for diagnosis treatment and prevention of other malignancies In the late 20th century cervical cancer underwent another important change With the display of the role of selected strands of HPV Human Papilloma Virus in the genesis of this malignancy it was transformed into a sexually transmitted disease This new understanding of cervical cancer linked it more firmly with lifestyle choices and thus increased the danger of stigmatisation of patients on the other hand it opened the possibility for efficient prevention of this malignancy through vaccination Ilana Lowy follows the disease from antiquity to the 21st century focussing on the period since the mid 19th century during which cervical cancer was dissociated from other gynaecological disorders and became a distinct entity Following the ways in which new developments in science medicine and society have affected beliefs about medical progress and an individual s responsibility gender roles reproduction and sex Lowy demonstrates our understanding of what cervical cancer is and how it can be prevented and cured
