Abstract

Introduction: Currently, only a few options are available for the treatment of patients with small-cell lung cancer (SCLC) after the failure of first-line platinum-based chemotherapy. The present study aimed to evaluate the efficacy and safety of apatinib plus chemotherapy for second-line treatment of advanced SCLC.

Patients and Methods: This prospective clinical trial recruited patients treated with apatinib plus second-line chemotherapy until disease progression or intolerable toxicity. Logrank test power analysis was used for calculating samples. The primary endpoint was progression-free survival (PFS), and the secondary endpoints were objective response rate (ORR), disease control rate (DCR), overall survival (OS), and safety.

Results: A total of 29/31 enrolled patients were available for response evaluation until October 2019. The ORR and DCR were 27.59% (8/29) and 96.55% (28/29), respectively. The median PFS and OS were 7.36 months and 14.16 months, respectively, indicating better efficacy compared with the standard second-line chemotherapies. The most common adverse events (AEs) were neutropenia (41.94%, 13/31), followed by leucopenia (35.48%, 11/31) and thrombocytopenia (25.81%, 8/31). The grade 3–4 AEs occurred in 12 (38.71%) patients, of which neutropenia (19.35%, 6/31), leucopenia (9.68%, 3/31), and proteinuria (6.45%, 2/31) were most common. Patients receiving an initial dose of apatinib 250 mg had a better tolerance.

Conclusion: Antiangiogenic therapy plus chemotherapy had encouraging efficacy in advanced SCLC patients, which provides an insight into the current status of second-line therapy in SCLC.

Cancer Chemotherapy II Two Twenty Second Hahnemann Symposium:

Chemotherapy Frederick Becker, 2012-12-06 The promise of chemotherapeutic control in the field of oncology seemed in the beginning no less bright than it had proven in the field of bacterial disease and therefore its failures were felt all the more. Despite the serendipitous discoveries and inspired insights which tantalized us with striking remissions or the rare tumors which proved to be fully susceptible to a given agent in the main there has been either total failure or a painfully slow acquisition of an armamentarium against a limited number of malignancies. To expect more however was the result of ignorance of the malignant cell for as has been described in the previous volumes of this series the exploitable differences between malignant and normal cells are few or undiscovered. Differences is the numerator in this formula but exploitable is the operational term for although a great number of differences between normal and malignant cells have been described rarely are these differences observed in a vital metabolic pathway or a crucial macromolecular structure. Essentially the basic metabolic pathways and nutritional requirements for normal and malignant cells are the same resulting in the fact that no chemotherapeutic agent can successfully inhibit a function in the majority of malignant cells without adversely affecting a similar function in the normal cell. It was therefore naive to expect a magic bullet which would select the malignant cell and destroy it.
