Cancer In China:

Cancer Epidemiology in China: What We Have Learnt So Far? Jianguang Ji, Tianhui Chen, Xiaochen Shu, Hao Liu, 2020-04-13 After several decades of development the socialist market economy of China is now the world's second largest economy by nominal GDP. China is also the largest economy by purchasing power parity according to the International Monetary Fund. In tandem with the development of the Chinese economy, China's cancer burden is rising rapidly due to an ageing population and the adoption of unhealthy lifestyle behaviours. According to the data from the National Central Cancer Registry (NCCR) of China, the incidence and mortality of cancer have been increasing rapidly in China. In recent years, cancer has been the leading cause of death among city residents and the second cause of death among rural residents, which has become a stark public health issue in China. According to the NCCR, an estimated 4.29 million new incident cases, 12 thousand per day, and 2.81 million death cases, 7.5 thousand per day, would occur in 2015 in China. This corresponds to the age-standardized incidence rate (ASIR) of 201.1 per 100,000 and age-standardized mortality rate (ASMR) of 126.9 per 100,000 respectively. Due to the geographical and ethnical disparities in living habits and healthcare level, the cancer spectrum differs between different regions and ethnical groups in China. According to the estimation from IARC, the incidence of nasopharyngeal carcinoma and liver cancer is the world's highest in specific regions of China. The incidence of some cancer types in Chinese urban areas, such as colorectal, prostate, kidney, and bladder cancers, is similar to that in developed countries or regions where the incidence of cancer is highly associated with obesity and westernised lifestyles. Nevertheless, the incidence of some common cancer types in rural areas, including oesophageal, stomach, liver, and cervical cancers, shares similarity with less developed countries or regions in the world where cancers are associated with chronic infectious agents due to poverty. In addition, the mortality rate is higher in rural areas, which suggests a poorer cancer prognosis due to late diagnosis and/or unsatisfying clinical treatment. The distinct cancer patterns of different regions and ethnic groups indicate a need for precise cancer prevention and control plans tailored for different geographical regions and ethnic groups. The overarching goal of the proposed Frontiers in Oncology Research Topic is to present current perspectives on cancer epidemiology in China, characteristics, and provide current knowledge of cancer burden, as well as cancer mortality, to academic investigators, clinicians, and stakeholders from the translational clinical and public health communities.

Chinese "Cancer Villages" Ajiang Chen, Pengli Cheng, Yajuan Luo, 2025-10-01 The phenomenon of cancer villages has emerged in many parts of rural China, drawing media attention and becoming a fact of social life. However, the relationship between pollution and disease is often hard to discern. Through sociological analysis of several villages with different social and economic structures, the authors offer a comprehensive, historically grounded analysis of the coexistence between the incidence of cancer environmental pollution and villagers lifestyles as well as the perceptions claims and responses of different actors They situate the appearance of cancer villages in the context of social economic and cultural change in China tracing the evolution of the issue over two decades and providing deep insights into the complex interactions and trade offs between economic growth environmental change and public health

Population medicine is an emerging medical discipline that aims to maximize aggregate and long term population health by mobilizing accessible resources through its five care responsibilities prevention diagnosis control treatment and recovery integrating and applying knowledge principles and technologies of modern medicine and related disciplines coordinating individual health behaviors and collective health actions and serving as the medical foundation of public health practices Population health economics is important in population medicine and public health Since resources are limited in order to maximize the aggregate and long term population health benefit we must produce and allocate resources in an effective and efficient manner The value of healthcare interventions are often underestimated and health resources are mostly insufficient The broader social and economic values of healthcare interventions are frequently ignored It is important that we distribute health resources wisely and maximize efficiencies at all three levels micro meso and macro levels Thus this Research Topic focuses on how population health economics as both a key method and a value can help population medicine practitioners to provide better and more efficient care to the population they serve
