Campaigning with Crook, and Stories of Army Life Charles King, 2017-04-10 Campaigning with Crook Charles King, 2017-05-07 Campaigning with Crook Originally published in 1890 by Charles King 1844 1933 consists of a narrative of General Crook's campaign against the Sioux in the Big Horn and Yellowstone country in Wyoming and Dakota in 1876 This was immediately after the massacre of Custer and his force on the Little Big Horn Captain King's hand in fiction we know well His true first hand description of actual events is here proved to be equally clever no narrative of frontier life of cavalry march and bivouac and Indian skirmish and battle with which we are familiar surpasses this in most of the elements of direct strong vivid telling narration The very country spreads before the reader the great rolling ranges of mountains the striking buttes or peaks of all manner of weird and grotesque shapes the winding river courses marked by the cottonwoods the sheltered grassy valleys the pools of stagnant alkali water the thickets and tufts of sage brush the sudden impetuous sweep of prairie fire the thick clouds of dust rising from the tramp of many hoofs the flickering light of camp fires the feverish haste of the alarm the exciting scenes on the picket line the reconnaissance the attack of all these and other kindred matters Captain King makes a truly artistic picture and there is enough of dramatic incident and figuring to lend a strong human interest to the landscape The Custer disaster took place on the 26th of June 1876 The expedition to which Captain King was attached under Generals Carr and Merritt left Fort Hays in Western Kansas two hundred miles to the south of the Little Big Horn in the same month It marched to the north to reinforce Crook and Terry and to take part in the general movement against the Indians of that year A period of three or four months is covered by this story it is more readable than fiction and after famished marches and sharp skirmishes the campaign comes to a close in the Black Hills There have been few more thrilling episodes in our army records than the race for rations which marked the close of this campaign when Crook's columns harassed by Indians in the rear hungry and empty handed with horses starving and men emaciated were pushing southward from the Little Missouri through Western Dakota to Deadwood in the Black Hills Buffalo Bill is one of the characters on this expedition not in theatrical disguise but in sober earnest as a veritable scout A still more interesting personage is his partner Buffalo Chips or James White of whom Captain King says He never drank I never heard him swear and no man ever heard him lie In these respects Buffalo Chips must have stood out up and apart from his kind like a butte from a prairie Campaigning with Crook (Abridged, Annotated) Charles King, 2016-11-12 In one of the classic works by a participant in the American Indian Wars Charles King writes of his time in the command of General George Crook in 1876 After the disaster at the Little Bighorn and the death of George A Custer King's 5th Cavalry was sent to reinforce Crook's column to continue the pursuit of the Sioux and Cheyenne Crook had already been attacked by forces led by Crazy Horse on June 17 1876 just eight days before Custer's defeat at the Little Bighorn King relates the ongoing campaign that lasted throughout the summer and into the fall All of the great figures of the time and place are mentioned here and it's another valuable addition to the literature of the period Every memoir of the American West provides us with another view of the struggles that changed the country forever
