Robertson,1987 Public Affairs Information Service Bulletin Public Affairs Information Service,1985 The Army Quarterly and Defence Journal ,1985 Conventional Deterrence Into the 1990s Thomas Boyd-Carpenter,1989 S geord Forward Defence Out of Area Policy Strategic Nuclear Weapons NATO Policy NATO Strategy The Future of Political Violence Richard Clutterbuck,1986-04-28 Includes papers from two conferences held in 1983 and sponsored by the Royal United Services Institute and Control Risks Information Services The Politics of Defence Budgeting Michael D. Hobkirk,1984 World War II exposed weaknesses in the management of defense resources leading the United Kingdom in 1946 and the United States in 1947 to centralize their defense organizations Although each organization has evolved differently both share the problem of interservice rivalry over resource allocation to competing service missions and weapons systems Michael Hobkirk a Ministry of Defense Under Secretary now retired argues that this intramural rivalry obstructs coherent defense planning His examination of the bureaucratic politics of resource allocation in the Ministry of Defence and the Department of Defense points up the strengths and weaknesses of both structures Combining the best features of each system he proposes a hypothetical ideal defense organization Such an organization would include a powerful central staff a planning programming budgeting system with functional categories for specific service tasks a long term budget system for future planning and most important a permanent cadre of civilian staff at the highest level In an era of ever more constrained resources and changing strategic requirements the need for maximum benefit from resources expended remains self evident This study should help defense planners students of organizational theory and those who would better understand the defense policies of our allies
