Campaigns and Elections American Style James A. Thurber, 2018-04-19 Dramatic changes in political institutions and behavior over the past three decades have underscored the dynamic nature of American politics confronting political scientists with a new and pressing intellectual agenda The pioneering work of early postwar scholars while laying a firm empirical foundation for contemporary scholarship failed to consider how American politics might change or recognize the forces that would make fundamental change inevitable In reassessing the static interpretations fostered by these classic studies political scientists are now examining the underlying dynamics that generate transformational change Transforming American Politics is a series that brings together texts addressing four closely related aspects of change A first concern is documenting and explaining recent changes in American politics in institutions processes behavior and policymaking A second is reinterpreting classic studies and theories to provide a more accurate perspective on postwar politics The series looks at historical change to identify recurring patterns of political transformation within and across the distinctive eras of American politics Last and perhaps most important the series presents new theories and interpretations that explain the dynamic processes at work and thus clarify the direction of contemporary politics All of the books focus on the central theme of transformation transformation in both the conduct of American politics and in the way we study and understand its many aspects Campaigns and Elections American Style James A. Campaigning in America Today: The Role of Campaigns in U.S. Presidential Elections Ilka Kreimendahl, 2003-08-29 Seminar paper from the year 2000 in the subject American Studies Culture and Applied Geography grade 1 A University of Kassel Anglistics course The Making of the President 2000 language English abstract There is no aspect of contemporary American politics more criticized than the modern political campaign it provides too little information for the voter the amount of money spent is too high there is no thoughtful discussion of issues and campaign organizers will reach to the very edge of acceptable practices to find some way of appealing to the voters These are some of the elements that are responsible for the growing disgust for election campaigns and the decline in political interest However the question is if campaigns really do have consequences for the election outcome or if their effect is rather limited This paper will focus on the development of political campaigns their strategy and planning as well as on issues and the presentation of the candidate The composition will further have a look on the campaign and election in 1992 on the actual effects the campaign has on the voter and consequently on the election outcome In the last two decades scholars perceived a change from old to new politics including a significant modification in the nature of campaigns In the last years the traditional party-oriented personal campaign has been largely replaced by the so called candidate centered media oriented campaign The basic elements of campaigns changed dramatically because of increased nonvoting the growth in the power of interest groups and the power of the media In national elections the expansion of the mass media campaign has led to a decline in the importance of party affiliation while at the same time the party organizations themselves became more powerful Encyclopedia of

Responsible Partisanship? John Clifford Green, Paul S. Herrnson, 2002 More than fifty years have passed since the American Political Science Association published Toward a More Responsible Two Party System a controversial report that addressed the lack of national cohesion within the major parties Although parties have changed a great deal since then they remain a critical component of American democracy While the possibilities and limits of responsible party government have been central topics in the literature since 1950 this book is the first to reassess all aspects of the APSA report Here a distinguished group of scholars among them Charles O Jones Barbara Sinclair Frank J Sorauf John Bibby and Gerald Pomper examine the effectiveness accountability and relevance of parties to the democratic process These articles cover all major relevant topics focusing on recent changes in laws that govern parties innovations in party organization party finance and the relationships among political consultants and parties They examine the place of the party in government including chapters on the changing role of parties in Congress and in the presidency and also consider the roles of parties among the electorate examining trends in voting behavior party identification and ideology A capstone essay by Leon Epstein the dean of American party scholars reviews the ongoing quest for responsible partisanship over the past half century These contributors offer a mixed assessment of the two party system showing that parties are in many respects stronger at the national level than they were in 1950 but not necessarily more responsible The most comprehensive description and analysis of American parties now available Responsible Partisanship

CQ's Congressional Election Simulation Julie Dolan, Marni Ezra, 2001-12-31 Focusing on an election for the US House of Representatives this simulation addresses campaign planning and is based on an actual congressional district in order to encourage and facilitate research The simulation illustrates the process involved in choosing a campaign message The Electoral Challenge: Theory Meets Practice Stephen C. Craig, 2006 If most elections are decided by forces beyond anyone's immediate control whether its national economic conditions or voters longstanding partisan attachments do campaigns really matter Scholars and political consultants will give you different answers While scholars insist that consultants operate by the seat of their pants promoting the latest folk wisdom about which strategies and tactics work not knowing one way or the other until its too late consultants claim that the academics tell us what they already know or if not their studies are simply wrong So who is right Stephen Craig takes up the challenge and brings together the voices and ideas of both groups in this engaging and innovative volume He aims to determine what we know and do not know based on empirical rather than anecdotal evidence about the factors that determine election outcomes While the backdrop is academic the focus is practical why do some candidates win and others lose on election day Each chapter contains an essay from a top scholar in the field followed in most cases by a response from the political consultants so students actually interact with this discourse By including the views and experiences of both groups the result is a dialogue from very different yet complementary perspectives on how campaigns matter
