Report on the Organization and Campaigns of the Army of the Potomac George Brinton McClellan,2023-07-18

Written by the commander of the Army of the Potomac during some of the bloodiest battles of the American Civil War this report provides a detailed look at the organization and strategies of the Union army McClellan offers insight into each of the major battles he fought including Antietam and Fredericksburg as well as detailed accounts of the day to day life of soldiers on the front This is essential reading for anyone interested in the history of the Civil War or military strategy in general This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it This work is in the public domain in the United States of America and possibly other nations Within the United States you may freely copy and distribute this work as no entity individual or corporate has a copyright on the body of the work Scholars believe and we concur that this work is important enough to be preserved reproduced and made generally available to the public We appreciate your support of the preservation process and thank you for being an important part of keeping this knowledge alive and relevant Report on the Organization and Campaigns George B. McClellan,2015-06-25 Excerpt from Report on the Organization and Campaigns Of the Army of the Potomac To Which Is Added an Account of the Campaign in Western Virginia With Plans of Battle Fields The attack upon Fort Sumter on the 12th of April 1861 took the Northern people by surprise and found them entirely unprepared to carry on a serious contest Our people were born and educated amidst the blessings of peace and material prosperity they were in the habit of yielding obedience to the laws of the country and the will of the majority as expressed in the elections and had become accustomed to see great political excitement and animosity calmly subside through the deference of the minority to the decision of the majority Thus to the last moment it was difficult to realize that a great civil war was imminent and men clung fondly to the hope that the good sense of both sections would in the eleventh hour find some honorable solution to the difficulty as had so often been the case before It is probable that neither section fully realized the power and violence of the passions evoked and that each flattered itself with the delusive hope that the other would yield something rather than risk the inevitable and terrible consequences of an appeal to arms Each underrated the strength resources and courage of the other These mutual misunderstandings ably used by a comparatively small number of ambitious and unscrupulous men were at their height when the insult offered the national flag in the harbor of Charleston aroused both parties to something like a true sense of their condition The South were warned that they were irrevocably committed to make good their threats and to establish by force their vaunted right of secession
