Regulatory Frameworks for Hawala and Other Remittance Systems International Monetary Fund, 2005-03-24 Hawala and other remittance systems have gained attention in recent years with the substantial growth of remittance flows from countries with large migrant labor forces and with increased focus on combating money laundering and the financing of terrorism The IMF and the World Bank have been researching these systems since 2002 to better understand the interplay of historical cultural and economic factors that promote such systems This book is a survey of regulatory practices and an overview of experiences in different countries and includes articles on regulatory frameworks in remitting and receiving countries and on the problems that can arise when regulating remittance systems

The Malaysia-Indonesia Remittance Corridor Raúl Hernández-Coss, World Bank, 2008 The Malaysia Indonesia Remittance Corridor finds that Indonesian migrants to Malaysia are showing an increasingly clear preference for informal transfer mechanisms compared to their counterparts in other countries A little less than half of all Indonesian migrants overseas thought to be around 2 million are working in Malaysia An increasing number of migrants are women and the corridor is also marked by a high number of undocumented migrants Only about 10 percent of the estimated flow of remittances into Indonesia from Malaysia is transferred through the formal system The extent of this preference for the informal sector is unique to this remittance corridor Indonesian migrants in other countries are using the formal sector far more than the migrants in Malaysia In addition Indonesian women and undocumented migrants in Malaysia especially find formal sector transfers either hard to access or inappropriate for their needs This report gives an overview of the Malaysia Indonesia remittance corridor and suggests policy avenues for improving access to formal remittance transfer channels increasing the transparency of the flows and the cost structure and facilitating remittance transfers particularly for undocumented and female migrant workers

The U.S.-Guatemala Remittance Corridor Hela Cheikhrouhou, World Bank, 2006 This study reports on recent development and future potential for US based Guatemalan workers cross border retail transfers to be more formal cheaper and prone to cross sale of financial products and services It also presents the key features of remittances Making Remittances Work Emiko Todoroki, Wameek Noor, Kuntay Celik, Anoma Kulathunga, 2014-06-19 Migrant workers routinely send small sums back to their families often a crucial lifeline for their survival But sending money across countries for these low income people is not easy and often very expensive and risky Better regulation and supervision of these payment channels can make the process easier to access and more secure The UK-Nigeria Remittance Corridor Raúl Hernández-Coss, Chinyere Ekwuagu Bun, 2007 This publication sets out the findings of the first research work to focus on the remittance market in Nigeria It examines the formal and informal channels that UK residents of Nigerian origin use to transfer remittances home how the funds are distributed to their beneficiaries in Nigeria and the role of intermediaries who facilitate the transfers The report goes on to make conclusions and recommendations based on the lessons drawn from research on other corridors including the need for improved data collection activities The U.S.-Mexico Remittance Corridor Raúl Hernández-Coss, 2005 The experience of Mexican nationals who send money home from the United States forms the basis for this study The authors identify three stages of the remittance process the First Mile when decisions are in the hands of the remittance sender the Intermediary Stage comprising systems that facilitate the cross border transfer of funds and the Last Mile where the funds reach the hands of the remittance recipient This analysis covering the last eight years may provide guidance for other remittance sending and receiving countries that seek to encourage formalization of the flow Vietnam, Selected Issues, 2006 International Social Science Journal, 2009 Journal of Economic Literature, 2005-12 HMSO Agency Catalogue Great Britain.
