Since criminal justice is an ever-evolving field of study, the shifting contexts of the social world will continue to impact and influence our criminal justice system and its policy responses.

State Control Robert Ratner, John L. McMullan, 1987. The study of social control has long been of academic interest. Group living requires the establishment of social and legal norms to govern behaviour, and societies seek to prevent violations of these norms by imposing penalties on those who break the rules. One form of legal violation is categorized as crime, and the perpetrators as criminals. Many criminologists study these rule breakers to find out why they step outside the mores and laws of their society. Other criminologists, however, aim their analysis in another direction: at the social order itself. Crime, they believe, is as much indicative of a problem in the society as in the individual who responds negatively to that society. Using a Marxist perspective, these radical criminologists argue that the elimination of crime can only come about through dramatic changes in the economic and political structures of society, and that any concept of state control of crime must be developed in conjunction with a theory of the state. State Control is the first book to apply this sociology of the state framework to the Canadian system of state control. In eleven specially commissioned chapters, scholars critically examine the links between the Canadian State and social control to provide radical criminology in this country with empirical illustration and historical specificity, and to provoke conceptual development. The text is organized in three sections, with each section containing two papers on related topics, plus a third paper presenting critical commentary. An introduction and epilogue by the editors outline the contending criminological theories and the current theoretical impasse in Canadian criminology, and suggest new directions for a sociology of the state and social control. In Part 1, contributors focus on the problem of criminal justice reform in Canada, seeking to clarify some of the integral ties between reform movements and the state, and questioning the very definition of reform. Part 2 uses contemporary theoretical and empirical models to analyze the relative autonomy of the state thesis as it applies to the Canadian criminal justice and legal systems. A third section contains theoretical and historical examinations of the Canadian State as they relate to criminal justice policies. This book will be of wide interest among students of sociology, criminology, law, political science, and Canadian studies.

Canadian Criminal Justice Today Frank Schmallegger, 2000. Indictment Benjamin Perrin, 2023-08-31. Based on first-hand interviews with survivors, people who have committed offences, and others on the frontlines, Indictment puts the Canadian criminal justice system on trial and proposes a bold new vision of transformative justice. MeToo. Black Lives Matter. Decriminalize Drugs. No More Stolen Sisters. Stop Stranger Attacks. Do we need more cops, or to defund the police? Harm reduction or treatment? Tougher sentences or prison abolition? The debate about Canada's criminal justice system has rarely been so polarized, or so in need of fresh ideas. Indictment brings the heartrending and captivating stories of survivors and people who have committed offences to the forefront to help us understand why the criminal justice system is facing such an existential crisis Benjamin Perrin draws on his expertise as a lawyer former top criminal justice advisor to the prime minister and law clerk at the Supreme Court of Canada to investigate the criminal justice system itself Indictment critiques the system from a trauma informed perspective examining its treatment of victims of crime Indigenous people and Black Canadians people with substance use and mental health disorders and people experiencing homelessness poverty and unemployment Perrin also shares insights from others on the frontlines including prosecutors and defence lawyers police chiefs Indigenous leaders victim support workers corrections officers public health experts gang outreach workers prisoner and victims rights advocates criminologists psychologists and leading trauma experts Bringing forward the voices of marginalized people along with their stories of survival and resilience Indictment shows that a better way is possible
