Treatment of Cancer Chemotherapy Induced Nausea and Vomiting Don S. Poster, 1981 Fast Facts:

Chemotherapy-Induced Nausea and Vomiting Rudolph M. Navari, Bernardo L. Rapoport, 2016-04-18 Few side effects of cancer treatment are more feared by patients than nausea and vomiting. Failure to control these symptoms on the first day of chemotherapy increases the risk of them occurring on subsequent days and in subsequent cycles of chemotherapy and can often result in patients refusing further cancer treatment. Very effective antiemetics are available to prevent this from happening but do you know how best to use them? Fast Facts: Chemotherapy Induced Nausea and Vomiting presents the evidence for the clinical agents that can prevent CINV along with the recommendations for their use in various clinical settings using recently established international guidelines. Correct administration of prophylactic antiemetics in relation to the emetogenicity of the chemotherapy being given not only improves patients' quality of life during treatment but also adherence to subsequent cancer treatments thus improving overall outcomes. This refreshingly readable handbook is therefore a must-read resource for all health professionals in a position to make this kind of a difference. Contents: Definitions and pathophysiology; Types of CINV and risk factors; Antiemetic agents; Prevention and management of acute and delayed CINV; Treatment of breakthrough refractory and anticipatory CINV; Prevention and treatment of chemotherapy-induced nausea; Barriers and opportunities in CINV management.

Matti Aapro, Karin Jordan, Petra Feyer, 2013-11-12 Treatment tolerance is a challenge for most cancer patients and it is therefore essential that healthcare professionals (HCPs) are quick to recognize adverse events and implement management strategies to address them. Prevention of Nausea and Vomiting in Cancer Patients provides comprehensive guidance on managing nausea and vomiting which are common and often severe adverse events experienced by patients receiving chemotherapy and radiotherapy. The book refers to the latest American Society of Clinical Oncology (ASCO), European Society of Medical Oncology (ESMO) and Multinational Association for Supportive Care in Cancer (MASCC) guidelines and will be a useful resource for oncologists, oncology fellows, general physicians and other HCPs wishing to learn more about the effective management of chemotherapy and radiotherapy-induced nausea and vomiting in cancer patients.

A description of a detailed clinical approach provides clinical practitioners with the most up to date recommendations for the prevention and treatment of chemotherapy induced nausea and vomiting CINV in various clinical settings CINV is one of the most feared treatment related toxicities Patient surveys for the past thirty years consistently demonstrate patients perception of deterioration in quality of life due to chemotherapy treatments The introduction of the antiemetics serotonin 5 HT3 receptor antagonists and the neurokinin 1 receptor antagonists have improved the control of chemotherapy induced emesis but the treatment of chemotherapy induced nausea remains a significant clinical problem Patients continue to have quality of life issues which prevent normal functioning during active treatment New agents such as the second generation 5 HT3 receptor antagonist palonosetron and the new neurokinin 1 receptor antagonists rolapitant and netupitant are being introduced into clinical practice and it is anticipated that these new agents will improve the control of CINV Agents such as olanzapine a FDA approved anti psychotic gabapentin a FDA approved neuroleptic and ginger a food additive which have been used primarily for other indications are now being tested as potential effective antiemetics This work represents the first available comprehensive summary that details all new antiemetic agents and particularly their clinical role in treating patients an important reference for practitioners seeking to improve the quality of life of patients undergoing chemotherapy
