Literacy and numeracy support for homeless adults: An exploration of third sector employment and skills provision

Katy Jones, July 2018

Summary

Whilst homeless people are increasingly expected to move into work, many face a number of barriers to labour market participation. A small but growing evidence base suggests that one key barrier is poor literacy and numeracy, or 'basic' skills. This briefing note summarises research focused on the literacy and numeracy support offered by third sector organisations, as part of their efforts to help homeless adults move into (or closer to) work. It presents key findings from 27 qualitative interviews conducted with staff working in the Greater Manchester homelessness sector. The research uncovers the extent and nature of literacy and numeracy provision offered in these organisations, along with a range of factors shaping it. It shows that organisations have demonstrated a propensity to develop literacy and numeracy support. However, it concludes that while government policy and related funding does not recognise and support such provision, it is likely to remain piecemeal and highly contingent on the contribution of volunteers and short term funding opportunities.

Developing Literacy Programs for Homeless Adults Joye A. Norris, Paddy Kennington, 1992 Traditional programming approaches to literacy education may be inadequate when dealing with the complexities of homelessness This book offers readers an examination of eight roles of literacy education in the overall services to homeless adults Resources in Education ,1993-06 Resources in Education ,1997 Literacy and Homelessness Project, Phase 3 Report David Greig, St. Christopher House (Toronto, Ont.). Adult Literacy Program, 1999 Program Development in Continuing Education Allan E. Goody, Charles E. Kozoll, 1995 Literacy S. N. Colamery, 2000 Literacy is defined as the ability to read and write One would expect that as the world enters the 21st century of the Third Millennium we wouldn't even need to discuss such a topic But alas that is not the case Even in the United States the only so called superpower left standing at the moment the rate of illiteracy is astonishing Some cynics say that there is no cause for alarm since the rich elite class needs millions of workers for low paid jobs and the less educated the better Others say that the lack of literacy is the fault of the schools and that if we double the pay of the teachers they will somehow suddenly be interested in teaching Still others say that with television and VCRs everywhere who needs to read and write anyway In this book we have collected citations sorted and indexed them in a way which we hope will be useful for those seeking further information on this topic At the beginning we offer excerpts from some of the fundamental reports summarising the dismal situation Laboring to Learn Lorna Rivera, 2008-08-28 The American adult education system has become an alternative for school dropouts with some state welfare policies requiring teen mothers and women without high school diplomas to participate in adult education programs to receive aid Very little has been published about women's experiences in these mandatory programs and whether the programs reproduce the conditions that forced women to drop out in the first place Lorna Rivera bridges the gap with this important study the product of ten years active ethnographic research with formerly homeless women who participated in adult literacy education classes before and after welfare reform Analyzing the web of ideological contradictions regarding work first welfare reform policies Rivera argues that poverty is produced and reproduced when women with low literacy skills are pushed into welfare to work programs and denied education Mentoring Adult Learners Norman Harris Cohen, 1995 This book is designed to provide pragmatic guidance to those who assume responsibility for the mentor role so that they can function as more significant influences in their mentoring relationships with adult learners as students or employees Intended audiences include the following two and four year college faculty counselors administrators staff at postsecondary educational institutions professionals who manage intern training programs and human resource development specialists in business and government from Abstract on Researchgate The Profession and Practice of Adult Education Sharan B.
