Development Of Moral Reasoning Practical Approaches:

Development of Moral Reasoning Donald B. Cochrane, Michael E. Manley-Casimir, 1980 Ethics in Health Administration: A Practical Approach for Decision Makers Eileen E. Morrison, 2019-01-29 Given the many advances in technology as well as the ongoing discussion of health care reform post Affordable Care Act today's healthcare administrators require a strong foundation in practice based ethics to confront the challenges of the current healthcare landscape Ethics in Health Administration Fourth Edition focuses on the application of ethics to the critical issues faced by today's healthcare administrators After establishing a foundation in the theory and principles of ethics the text encourages students to apply ethics to such areas change regulation technology and fiscal responsibility Thoroughly updated the Fourth Edition includes 12 new contemporary case studies that encourage students to apply ethics A new chapter on the Ethics in the Epoch of Change stresses major changes in healthcare including the digital revolution population health ethics temptations and ethic resilience Other chapters have been revised to include new cases and more Contemporary Approaches to Moral Education James S. Kiraly, Karin Maksymski, Silvia Hansen-Schirra, 2013 Handbook of Juvenile Delinquency Herbert C. Quay, 1987-05-12 Abstract This handbook provides a critical review of literature and the latest research and theory on juvenile delinquency The authors examine psychological aspects of the juvenile delinquent condition including epidemiology psychological correlates family contributions to delinquency patterns of delinquent behavior prediction prevention treatment and research issues This work is a valuable contribution to the literature on juvenile delinquency offering an improved scientific understanding for psychologists sociologists correctional and criminal professionals and others who work with these young people Values Education and Technology Peter Christopher Emberley, 1995 For decades values education has been one of the most hotly contested areas of reappraisal in school curricula This book contributes to the debate with the controversial proposition that the current modes of values education are not cultivating the qualities associated with moral judgment and character that they are in fact producing a consciousness which merely reinforces some of the potentially destructive tendencies of modern technology Emberley sets the stage for his argument with an examination of the progressive initiatives in education since the 1960s He discusses the expectations which arose with the proposals to teach values as an explicit component of the curriculum and reveals a hidden agenda which undermines their explicit objectives He goes on to explore the relation between values education and technology building on the thought of Hannah Arendt and Eric Voegelin Technology according to Emberley is becoming the entire context for our understanding of reason politics and the intellectual or spiritual life The question is raised whether technology has become the ontology of our age as George Grant suggested and whether it has eclipsed essential relations and experiences which have traditionally defined our humanity Emberley depicts technological development as proceeding through three historical phases which he characterizes as a mechanical order an organic order and an electric field By the third phase he proposes traditional humanism has nearly disappeared Emberley offers a systematic analysis of three of the dominant models of values education and suggests that they bolster this deconstruction of humanism by playing out the philosophic relation between Kant Hegel and Nietzsche His analysis also indicates how these models replicate the structure of each of the technological phases The consequence of this collusion between values education and technological consciousness is a person who cannot be critical of technology one who cannot recognize any limits to our technological prowess Whether this collusion is intentional or inadvertent is one of the many issues Emberley pursues He proposes pedagogical options which revive the spirit though not the letter of the traditional curriculum He argues that the aim of education is to produce a character that does not allow reason to become merely a faculty of shrewd calculation and technical expertise
