Personal Branding Strategies of Female Entertainment Influencers on TikTok Shaofu Wang,2020 This thesis employs quantitative content analysis to investigate the strategies used by female entertainment influencers FEI on TikTok to attract followers The study investigated the six FEIs with the most followers on the TikTok and Douyin Chinese version of TikTok three each from both platforms This study focuses on the visual framework strategy as the theoretical basis to analyze female entertainment influencers videos N 90 The results show that FEIs tend to wear casual clothes and shoot videos with simple backgrounds Most shooting angles are half length or full body shots which do not display multiple feminine movements in videos Regression analyses were conducted to estimate the relationships between the sixteen categories and the number of likes and reposts for videos Regression analyses showed that among the sixteen variables breast stance and facial expression have a noticeable influence on the number of likes while the number of reposts was significantly affected by breast and stance Moreover quantitative analysis using the one way ANOVA test and frequency analysis established differences in strategies between FEIs who use different versions of TikTok One such difference is the preference of Chinese FEIs to use complicated editing techniques on Douyin while American FEIs choose simple editing procedures on TikTok Similarly only less than a quarter of Chinese FEIs videos depict the body s casual touching which is significantly lower than that of American FEIs in frequency By collecting videos of each influencer at different phases of their popularity the author makes an effort to reveal influencers strategies for establishing personal branding The findings of this research help extend the current body of knowledge regarding the use of visual framing on emerging social media by recommending better applications of personal branding strategies Moreover this study makes up for the lack of literature on the influence and significance of female influencers on the TikTok platform Influencers build their personal brands and communities through unique tastes and the results of this study will be informative for marketing and personal brand building on new social media This study also provides specific information and guidance for female users for marketing their personal brands targeting specific markets and user groups on TikTok Abstract
