Dependencies Connections And Other Relations A Theory Of Mental Causation:

Dependencies, Connections, and Other Relations Wim de Muijnck, 2013-03-09 The text before you is a study of the problematic issue of mental causation by minds. On hearing the expression mental causation you may at first think of something like bending spoons by psychic powers. But no, we are dealing here with something much more puzzling: doing things for reasons, i.e. what we call agency. Psychic spoon bending would be a fairly straightforward issue. You just exert some psychic force and bend a spoon just like you might bend it by hand, i.e. by physical force. The only trouble here is that psychic forces may not be in fact available. But now you fetch an umbrella because you expect that it will rain. How does that work? Somehow it seems you let an expectation move your limbs. But aren't your limbs already moved by nerve impulses and muscle contractions? And are expectations the proper kind of items to move things around? Mental causation is an issue that is at the heart of the mind-body problem, the problem of making it clear how minded creatures such as we are possible and what our mindedness consists in. Unlike psychic spoon bending, mental causation happens every day. At least pretty much of what we take for granted about ourselves can only be right when mental causation really happens. Dependencies, Connections and Other Relations Willem Muijnck, 2002

Mental Causation Anthony Dardis, 2008-09-10 Two thousand years ago Lucretius said that everything is atoms in the void; it's physics all the way down. Contemporary physicalism agrees. But if that's so, how can we, how can our thoughts, emotions, our values, make anything happen in the physical world? This conceptual knot, the mental causation problem, is the core of the mind-body problem, closely connected to the problems of free will, consciousness, and intentionality. Anthony Dardis shows how to unravel the knot. He traces its early appearance in the history of philosophical inquiry, specifically in the work of Plato, Aristotle, Descartes, and T. H. Huxley. He then develops a metaphysical framework for a theory of causation, laws of nature, and the causal relevance of properties. Using this framework, Dardis explains how macro or higher-level properties can be causally relevant in the same way that microphysical properties are causally relevant by their relationship with the laws of nature. Smelling an orange, choosing the orange rather than the cheesecake, reaching for the one on the left instead of the one on the right: mental properties such as these take their place alongside the physical motor of the world in making things happen. Thought-Contents Steven E. Boër, 2006-11-23

According to our commonsense view of the matter, beliefs, desires, intentions, and the like are special kinds of internal states, the possession of which by a given creature potentially explains its behavior and otherwise renders the creature intelligible to us. So-called folk psychology provides us with a rough and ready network of counterfactuals delimiting the role supposedly played by these internal states vis-à-vis perceptual input, inference, and behavioral output in a normal member of our species. The exact empirical details of this network do not matter here, for we are not undertaking further refinement or systematization of the relevant counterfactuals. Instead, our topic is the ontological analysis of the internal states that occupy the nodes of this complex network and the bearing of that analysis on the truth conditions of the sentences we use to ascribe beliefs and related states The relevant counterfactuals canonically describe particular belief desire and intention states as states of believing desiring and intending that such a such The use of in nitival clauses to describe desires and intentions is not really an exception for desiring or intending to do A or to be F is just having a self regarding desire or intention that oneself does A or that oneself is F By the lights of our commonsense psychology then to be in a particular belief desire or intention state is to bear the corresponding attitudinal relation believing desiring or intending to a certain content
