Dermatologic Conditions in Skin of Color

Despite increased reporting of race and ethnicity in dermatology clinical trials, the percentage of non-White participants has not changed over the past 10 years.

An analysis of dermatologic textbooks showed that Fitzpatrick skin types V and VI are dramatically underrepresented compared with U.S. demographics. The one exception is sexually transmitted infections; skin of color represents 47% to 58% of images depicting these infections.

A systematic review of 36 articles evaluating cutaneous manifestations of COVID-19 showed that 120 out of 130 images (92%) represented patients with Fitzpatrick skin types I to III, with no images representing skin types V or VI.
