study committee examined several options to study health outcomes of depleted uranium exposure in military and veteran populations and concluded that it would be difficult to design a study to comprehensively assess depleted uranium related health outcomes with currently available data The committee further concluded that the option most likely to obtain useful information about depleted uranium related health outcomes would be a prospective cohort study if future military operations involve exposure to depleted uranium The book contains recommendations aimed at improving future epidemiologic studies and identifying current active duty military personnel and veterans with potential DU exposure
