Design through Dialogue Karen A. Franck, Teresa von Sommaruga Howard, 2010-02-15 Completed projects receive more public attention than the process of their creation and so the myth that architects design buildings alone lives on. In fact, architects work with a great many others and the relationships that develop particularly with clients have a significant impact on design. Design through Dialogue explores the relationship between client and architect through the lens of four overlapping activities that occur during any project: relating, talking, exploring, and transforming. Cases of design and collaboration range from smaller scale retail, residential, and educational projects in the US, Sweden, the UK, and the Pacific Rim to large institutions including Seattle's Central Library, the National Museum of the American Indian in Washington DC, the Supreme Court in Jerusalem, and the Museum of New Zealand. Material is taken from interviews with clients and architects and research in psychotherapy, group dynamics, and design studies. Throughout the book, aspects of process are linked to design outcomes to illustrate how architects and clients collaborate creatively. Good Housekeeping, 1929

Allan Christopher is a self-made African American multimillionaire. Starting out with nothing but family, very high intelligence, ambition, and drive, he succeeded against the odds. He dealt with racism, discrimination, and the naysayers. Black and white, who were convinced he would never make it as an entrepreneur in the 1960s. Opening a fix-it shop in southside Chicago, through hard work and determination, he turns it into a multi-million dollar corporation. He's made his mark. His home is a thirty-room estate. He is among the Who's Who of Black America. His company is listed in the Fortune 500. He is a mover and shaker in the community and all the connections that accompany it. He faithfully attends church on Sundays. But has he made it? With the advent of his sixtieth birthday, his character, his past, and his beliefs come into focus. Honor and question as his story is told through the eyes of his family and with it, his impact on their lives. The time is 1988, the place Chicago.
