Cross Polity Time Series Data:

Cross-Polity Time-Series Data Arthur S. Banks, 1963-01-01 The assembly of an archive of longitudinal data on the world's nation states was undertaken by the Center for Comparative Political Research in 1968 with computer facilitated procedures for the storage reassembly and retrieval of its content The present volume is a cathode ray tube printout of a substantial portion of the CCPR file The period chosen dates from 1815 immediately after the Congress of Vienna and the establishment of the modern international system to 1966 and excludes the years of the two major wars 1914 1918 and 1940 1945 Virtually all independent nation states throughout the world are included Of the variables embraced by the file about 25 percent are political and some of these such as the method of legislative selection are qualitative in character The remaining variables include ecological social and economic attributes For the most part these are interval scaled that is they represent data in true numerical units such as dollars miles telephones per capita For each country from the time of its formal inception year by year figures are given over all the variables for which reliable data have been found or can be estimated During years between those for which original source data are available computer interpolations are given and are so identified Among the 102 variables are the following area population population density and population in cities of various sizes the type and method of selection of the effective executive size of cabinet and cabinet changes changes in the effective executive revenue expenditure and defense expenditure telegraph mileage first class mail delivered telephones radios newspaper circulation and book production imports exports and proportion of world trade gross domestic product and gross national product currency per capita official and black market exchange rates physicians per capita primary and secondary school and university enrollments percent of literacy railroad mileage number of highway vehicles energy production and consumption and numbers of assassinations general strikes government crises purges riots antigovernment demonstrations and revolutions Sources of the data in addition to a wide variety of original materials include the Almanach de Gotha The Statesman's Yearbook The Times London The New York Times Whitaker's Almanac and League of Nations and United Nations publications

Political Fragility: Coups D'État and Their Drivers Aliona Cebotari, Enrique Chueca-Montuenga, Yoro Diallo, Yunsheng Ma, Ms. Rima A Turk, Weining Xin, Harold Zavarce, 2024-02-16 The paper explores the drivers of political fragility by focusing on coups d'état as symptomatic of such fragility It uses event studies to identify factors that exhibit significantly different dynamics in the runup to coups and machine learning to identify these stressors and more structural determinants of fragility as well as their nonlinear interactions that create an environment propitious to coups The paper finds that the destabilization of a country's economic political or security environment such as low growth high inflation weak external positions political instability and conflict set the stage for a higher likelihood of coups with overlapping stressors amplifying each other These stressors are more likely to lead to breakdowns in political systems when demographic pressures and underlying structural weaknesses especially poverty exclusion and weak governance are present or when policies are weaker through complex interactions Conversely strengthened fundamentals and macropolicies have higher returns in structurally fragile environments in terms of staving off political breakdowns suggesting that continued engagement by multilateral institutions and donors in fragile situations is likely to yield particularly high dividends The model performs well in predicting coups out of sample having predicted a high probability of most 2020 23 coups including in the Sahel region

The book is organized in four parts: a theoretical introduction, discussions of authoritarianism, corporatism and the state, comparative and case studies, and conclusions and implications.
