absurdities of the American academy      Deadly Worlds Charles Lemert, Anthony Elliott, 2006 Deadly Worlds offers an original analysis of one of the unsolved questions of the current age: what are the emotional costs and possibilities of globalization? Lemert and Elliott challenge the dominant interpretations of the late modern world by delving below the surface of cultural and economic theories to explore theories of the new individualism. Against European ideas that the individual is either a manipulated artifact of mass culture or a reflexive self facing global risks they pose the possibility that the new worlds are actually deadly. Against the American tradition of viewing the individual as having abandoned her moral center they suggest the necessity of rediscovered aggression as a proper moral quality. Deadly Worlds is controversial but also plain spoken and intriguing. It dares to rework the case method by telling the stories of real individuals: Kelly struggling to find herself by plastic surgery; Norman responding to a positive HIV status by remaking his community; Larry desperately seeking to control the world's demands by therapy; Phyllis using her natural gift for aggression to heal and build institutions. The life stories root the book's themes in worlds all can recognize while the presentation of the prevailing theories of globalization and its effects expand the reader's social imagination to new possibilities.

Critical Social Theory and Evaluation Practice Melissa Freeman, 2010-10-12 As a practice meant to improve society, evaluation is implicated in discussions about which societal and cultural values and principles of justice will prevail and which ones will get subverted or ignored altogether. For the most part, as currently configured, the relationship of evaluators to policy makers has jeopardized evaluation's ability to provide the critical lens needed for feedback on the effects of a society's practices, policies, and structures. Many theorists believe that it is only by examining and critically assessing how knowledge is produced and reproduced in society that we can better reflect on and imagine new, more socially just social configurations and relations. One such approach, critical theory, is a pedagogical practice that employs a systemic and historical critique of social and cultural formations and practices in a way that fosters citizens' abilities to evaluate and alter them. The intent of this issue of New Directions for Evaluation is to show the relevance of critical social theory for evaluation practice. Each of the authors in this volume addresses, in a different way and from a variety of disciplinary fields, what a critical theory lens might offer evaluation practice. This is the 127th volume of the Jossey-Bass quarterly report series New Directions for Evaluation, an official publication of the American Evaluation Association.

American Book Publishing Record, 2006      Access, 2004      Inquiry, 2003      New Directions in International Relations? Richard A. Higgott, 1988      Critical Issues in STEM Evaluation Douglas Huffman, Frances Lawrenz, 2006-03-31 This volume of New Directions for Evaluation focuses on evaluation of science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) programs with special emphasis on evaluation of STEM education initiatives. STEM evaluation has always been important given the issues facing public schools and the economic and social considerations of STEM fields. But because these fields today face a variety of concerns, this discussion of STEM evaluation is particularly timely. Evaluation advances may contribute to STEM fields by helping programs address the challenges they face. This volume presents multiple viewpoints and state of the art examples and methodological approaches in the hope that its chapters will contribute to the understanding of STEM evaluation STEM education STEM education evaluation and evaluation in general Overall this volume of New Directions for Evaluation may help not only to move the field to consider new methods and methodologies for engaging in evaluation but also to reconsider ideas of what it means to engage in scientific evaluation

Painting Codes Andrea Bruciati, Alessandra Galasso, 2006 The British National Bibliography Arthur James Wells, 2006 Critical Issues in Social Thought Murray Milgate, Cheryl B. Welch, 1989 An outstanding feature of recent developments in social and political thought consists in practical and theoretical improvements in our understanding across disciplines Concomitant with this trend towards the creative trespassing of disciplinary boundaries is the revival of interest in the work of those social and political thinkers who launched the modern idea of social science The collection of essays in this work whether historical or analytical in emphasis address the theoretical issues that are of contemporary concern in several of the recognized social scientific disciplines The contributors to this book draw from the works of Adam Smith Alexis de Tocqueville John Stuart Mill Karl Marx Max Weber Emile Durkheim and Sigmund Freud figures who emerge as the bearers of a well defined classical legacy applicable to current analysis

Life in Schools Peter McLaren, 2003 Ever wondered who were the first people in space Or who reads back to front And just who wrote in a secret code This book answers a wide range of who questions and provides further information with fun filled facts Appealing artworks help explain the answers allowing children to build up their knowledge on a variety of subjects
