Abstract—This study examined the effects of a 12-week, 30-min, 3 times per week, supervised, group-based, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of 100 elderly women. The program was designed to improve aerobic and muscular fitness, balance, and flexibility. The program was evaluated using a pretest and posttest design. The results showed that the program significantly improved aerobic fitness, muscular strength, balance, and flexibility. The program also significantly improved HRQL, as measured by the SF-36. The program was well tolerated and enjoyed by the participants. The results suggest that a supervised, group-based, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program can improve the physical fitness and HRQL of elderly women.
