Discovering Traditional Farm Buildings:

Discovering Traditional Farm Buildings J.E.C. Peters, 2008-03-04 Farm buildings form an important element in the landscape whether they are found in villages or hamlets or are isolated in the countryside In their design they reflect the differences in types and methods of farming between one area and another and between different periods of history They thus provide valuable material evidence for agricultural history However the old buildings are generally not suited to modern farming methods A great many have been converted to houses or some other use others have been modified or demolished or left to decay The need to study and record what is left is therefore very urgent The traditional farmstead was composed of a number of different buildings each with its own characteristic features and each serving a different purpose This book looks at the purely agricultural buildings in turn so that each can be recognised as a barn a cowhouse a stable and so on the house is ignored being a subject on its own The buildings are looked at as you would approach them noting first the features visible from outside then those seen inside and only finally the plan The book also looks more briefly at the way buildings are grouped together The Historical Farm Buildings of Wales Eurwyn Wiliam, 1986

Appraisal and Repair of Timber Structures Peter Ross, 2002 Timber is one of the oldest of man's building materials but because the building scene today is dominated by concrete and steel many designers are unfamiliar with the properties of timber and its structural vocabulary This new book begins with an extended introduction to timber as a building material its various forms and properties its response to environmental conditions and the Building Regulations relating to its use It goes on to follow the general sequence of work starting with the commission and then dealing with the survey the investigation and the appraisal

Lonely Planet Discover Ireland Lonely Planet, 2018-05-01 The Archaeology of Buildings Richard K. Morriss, 2000 The study of buildings whether out of sheer interest or to assist planning decisions is a branch of archaeology which is distinct from both archaeology and architectural history yet allied to both This book begins by providing background information about studying the basic materials used in a building's construction such as stone brick or timber framing The author explains how various clues left by the builders can add to the historic background and use of the site and explains how all these strands of information can be woven together to produce a detailed understanding of how any
