Discussion And Interaction In The Academic Community Instructors Notes And Commentary Michigan Se:

Discussion and Interaction in the Academic Community Carolyn G. Madden, Theresa N. Rohlck, 1997 The increased focus on internationalism in business and academics has caused an increase in the awareness of the importance of interactive skills for both native and nonnative speakers One of the primary focuses of Discussion and Interaction in the Academic Community is to enhance the ability of nonnative speakers of English to contribute to the development of their disciplines and to the internationalism of the academic community For many students one of the most difficult tasks is to interact effectively and confidently within the discussions seminars and ongoing dialogues in their disciplines All of these areas require opportunity awareness and understanding of communication strategies knowledge of effective discourse and a willingness to participate Discussion and Interaction in the Academic Community is divided into three major sections Unit 1 focuses on the student as a member of the academic community Unit 2 focuses on the student as facilitator Unit 3 focuses on the student as expert The objective of these units is to make students comfortable within the academic environment to provide students with the opportunity to learn new skills for participation in academic discussion and to provide students the opportunity to present critique monitor and improve on the exchange of technical information The text builds on the expertise and the linguistic abilities of the learners It assumes that while many of the learners have a sense of their academic goals and have much information to bring to bear on any task their ability to make their knowledge and objectives explicit in English is limited This is a vital text for the growing cadre of students who find themselves at ease within their disciplines but unable to make themselves fully understood in an English speaking environment Research in Education ,1970-05
