Wells,2014-02-13 A little more than a century ago H G Wells lecture at the Royal Institution expressed the dynamic optimism of an always better future Despite the passage of time Wells lecture remains relevant as we seek to avoid the absolutism of true believers who inflicted such horrors in the last century It is not that Wells was smugly optimistic he recognized then as today This present time is a period of quite extraordinary uncertainty and indecision upon endless questions moral questions aesthetic questions religious and political questions upon which we should all of us be happier to feel assured and settled Wells recognized it is still a fundamental presumption of the established morality that one must do right though the heavens fall In today's world that nicely sums up the Teaparty in the U S and the Barons of Austerity who now hold such power in Europe But Wells was also unduly optimistic his principle theme that there are people coming into this world who would refuse to call it a Right if it brought the heavens about our heads however authoritative its sources and sanctions and this new disposition I believe is a growing one In that he makes his greatest error Wells assumes enlightenment is a permanent achievement he overlooks the perpetual swing throughout history between optimism and pessimism Much of the last century was the world wide conflict between heritage and the true believers who sought to destroy old customs to impose new ideologies The last century trashed much of the progress that could have been perhaps in reading Wells observations the next century will be better The Discovery of the Future Herbert George Wells,1906 College and the Future Richard
