Mortality and Causes of Death in 20th-Century Ukraine France Meslé, Jacques Vallin, 2012-01-07 The Ukraine faced two very different kinds of health crises during the twentieth century First in the 1930s and 1940s famine war and political upheaval caused massive population losses Previous evaluations of overall losses have given an idea of the scale of these catastrophes but do not distinguish between crisis mortality birth shortfall and loss through emigration Based on a painstaking work of reconstitution this study is the first to provide a detailed estimation of the hecatomb in terms of number of deaths and life expectancy The famine of 1933 was alone responsible for the deaths of 2.6 million Ukrainians and reduced male and female life expectancies to 7 and 11 years respectively Once the crises of the 1930s and 1940s were over the earlier trend in health resumed and mortality declined steadily until the 1960s At this point however a new type of crisis appeared that caused a sustained reversal in the existing trends Life expectancy for women stopped increasing altogether while that for men began a relentless year on year regression Notwithstanding the confusing picture created by the fluctuations of the 1980s and 1990s the long term trend is to further deterioration To understand the factors involved this study analyses in detail the combined effects of different causes of death at different ages

The Womb and the Simile of the Woman in Labor in the Hebrew Bible Karen Langton, 2024-10-30 This book explores figurative images of the womb and the simile of a woman in labor from the Hebrew Bible problematizing previous interpretations that present these as disparate images and showing how their interconnectivity embodies relationship with YHWH In the Hebrew Bible images of the womb and the pregnant body in labor do not co occur despite being grounded in an image of a whole pregnant female body the pregnant body is instead fragmented into these two constituent parts and scholars have continued to interpret these images separately with no discussion of their interconnectivity In this book Langton explores the relationship between these images inviting readers into a wider conversation on how the pregnant body functions as a means to an end a place to access and seek a relationship with YHWH Readers are challenged and asked to rethink how these images have been interpreted within feminist scholarship with womb imagery depicting YHWH's care for creation or performing the acts of a midwife and the pregnant body in labor as a depiction of crisis Langton explores select texts depicting these images focusing on the corporeal experience and discussing direct references and allusions to the physicality of a pregnant body within these texts This approach uncovers ancient and current androcentric ideology which dictates that conception gestation and birth must be controlled not by the female body but by YHWH The Womb and the Simile of the Woman in Labor in the Hebrew Bible is of interest to students and scholars working on the Hebrew Bible gender in the Bible and the Near East more broadly and feminist biblical criticism

Comparison of Women's Perceptions of Vaginal and Cesarean Births Marshelle Mink Melichar, 1980 A Crisis of Births Elizabeth L. Krause, 2005 When reproduction becomes a political issue where do you stand A CRISIS OF BIRTHS POPULATION POLITICS AND FAMILY MAKING IN ITALY tells the fascinating story of Italian families in the 1990s when Italy had the lowest birthrate of any nation in the world You ll gain an in depth understanding of why Italy s birthrate has fallen so low and what this means for Italians as individuals and Italy as a society and how reproduction has become politicized Personal dialogues with ordinary people ranging from sweater makers to counts and aging bachelors to doting mothers reveal how a silent revolution against patriarchy reshapes social and sexual morality to create new imperatives for family making *Diplomatic and Consular Reports. THE BIRTH OF THE RUSSIAN DEMOCRACY A. J. SACK, 1918 Economic Crises and Demographic Outcomes Pungpond Rukumnuaykit, 2003 This dissertation examines the short run impacts of the Indonesian economic crises on different demographic outcomes of infants and women In the first chapter I examine whether the recent Indonesian financial crisis and the 1997 1998 drought and smoke haze crises had adverse effects on infants birthweight and mortality In the second chapter I examine the effects of the 1998 economic crisis on the ages of female first marriages and first births This dissertation uses data from three waves of the Indonesia Family Life Survey IFLS1 1993 IFLS2 1997 and IFLS3 2000 The methodology used in the first chapter is to compare health conditions of newborns of different birth cohorts The estimations of both neonatal and post neonatal mortality risks are carried out using multivariate regressions with socio economic control variables such as mother s education place of residence province community and gender of the child In addition mortality risks are estimated using hazard models to capture the mortality risks at different ages in months The paper uses both nonparametric and parametric hazard models to estimate the hazard rates The effects of the crises on birthweights are analyzed using multivariate regressions and comparisons of birthweight cumulative distributions Estimated results on mortality outcomes show that the financial crisis had adverse impacts on neonatal mortality in both urban and rural areas The adverse effects of the financial crisis on post neonatal mortality risks were larger and more statistically significant for urban infants than for rural infants The drought smoke crisis adversely affected post neonatal mortality risks in rural areas The estimated results show that rural infants born during the drought smoke crisis experienced approximately a 4 4 percentage points increase in their infant mortality risks 44 per 1 000 live births The magnitude of the effects almost doubled after controlling for community fixed effects None of the crises significantly affected birthweight I find that the lack of evidence on the adverse effects may be due to selection problems in reported birthweights In the second chapter effects of the crisis on ages of female first marriage and first births are estimated using hazard models The methods used include both parametric and non parametric estimations of the marriage and first birth hazards conditional and unconditional on being married Estimated results indicate that overall there was an increase in the probability of getting married and a decrease in the probability of having first births among Indonesian women during the crisis in both conditional and unconditional analyses These findings support the hypothesis that marriages of individuals in a household and delaying first births may have been used as income smoothing mechanisms in the time of the crisis Results from this paper are not sufficient to draw any conclusion on why an increase in marriage probability and a delay in having first birth took place We speculate that women are more likely to get married during the time of the crisis to take advantage of economies of scale and specialization in household production and consumption The delays of first births might be due to a consumption smoothing consideration or other supply factors such as the separation of spouses when relocation of individuals occurred during the crisis

Butters, 2002 In early twentieth century motion picture houses offensive stereotypes of African Americans were as predictable as they were prevalent Watermelon eating chicken thievery savages with uncontrollable appetites Sambo and Zip Coon were all representations associated with African American people Most of these caricatures were rendered by whites in blackface Few people realize that from 1915 through 1929 a number of African American film directors worked diligently to counter such racist definitions of black manhood found in films like D W Griffith's The Birth of a Nation the 1915 epic that glorified the Ku Klux Klan In the wake of the film's phenomenal success African American filmmakers sought to defend and redefine black manhood through motion pictures Gerald Butters's comprehensive study of the African American cinematic vision in silent film concentrates on works largely ignored by most contemporary film scholars African American produced and directed films and white independent productions of all black features Using these race movies to explore the construction of masculine identity and the use of race in popular culture he separates cinematic myth from historical reality the myth of the Euro American controlled cinematic portrayal of black men versus the actual black male experience Through intense archival research Butters reconstructs many lost films expanding the discussion of race and representation beyond the debate about good and bad imagery to explore the construction of masculine identity and the use of race as device in the context of Western popular culture He particularly examines the filmmaking of Oscar Micheaux the most prolific and controversial of all African American silent film directors and creator of the recently rediscovered Within Our Gates the legendary film that exposed a virtual litany of white abuses toward blacks Black Manhood on the Silent Screen is unique in that it takes contemporary and original film theory applies it to the distinctive body of African American independent films in the silent era and relates the meaning of these films to larger political social and intellectual events in American society By showing how both white and black men have defined their own sense of manhood through cinema it examines the intersection of race and gender in the movies and offers a deft interweaving of film theory American history and film history
