

Steps in Conducting a Drug Use Evaluation

1. Determine Optimal Use.

- Established criteria are defined to compare optimal use with actual use.
 - Should focus on relevant outcomes and identify the relevant drugs to be monitored for optimal use in advance.
- For example, if the use of a drug class prescribed to treat a patient with diabetes is being evaluated, then standards should be determined to identify all drugs within the drug class and to evaluate each drug's effectiveness, such as a decrease in blood glucose level to within normal limits.
