Schooling and Fertility in the Developing World

John F. May, Jack A. Goldstone

Critical Perspectives on Schooling and Fertility in the Developing World National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, 1998-12-11 This volume assesses the evidence and possible mechanisms for the associations between women s education fertility preferences and fertility in developing countries and how these associations vary across regions It discusses the implications of these associations for policies in the population health and education sectors including implications for research Critical perspectives on schooling and fertility in the developing world Caroline H. Women, Literacy and Development Anna Robinson-Pant, 2004-08-12 Women's literacy is often assumed Bledsoe, 1999 to be the key to promoting better health family planning and nutrition in the developing world This has dominated much development research and has led to women s literacy being promoted by governments and aid agencies as the key to improving the lives of poor families High dropout rates from literacy programmes suggest that the assumed link between women's literacy and development can be disputed. This book explores why women themselves want to learn to read and write and why all too often they decide that literacy classes are not for them Bringing together the experiences of researchers policy makers and practitioners working in more than a dozen countries this edited volume presents alternative viewpoints on gender development and literacy through detailed first hand accounts Rather than seeing literacy as a set of technical skills to be handed over in classrooms these writers give new meaning to key terms such as barriers culture empowerment and motivation Divided into three sections this text examines new research approaches a gendered perspective on literacy policy and programming and implementation of literacy projects in African Asian and South American contexts With new insights and groundbreaking research this collection will interest academics and professionals working in the fields of development education and gender studies Indian Economy and Society in the Era of Globalisation and Liberalisation Ali Mohammed Khusro, N. S. Siddharthan, 2005 A Tribute To The Great Economist Prof A M Khusro This Book Seeks To Address Issues Of Current Relevance Agriculture Land Reforms And Anti Poverty Programmes Environment Globalisation Liberalisation And Trade Macro Models And Growth Population Secularism And Religion Literacy and Mothering Robert A. LeVine, 2012-01-27 Women's schooling is strongly related to child survival and other outcomes beneficial to children throughout the developing world but the reasons behind these statistical connections have been unclear In Literacy and Mothering the authors show for the first time how communicative change plays a key role Girls acquire academic literacy skills even in low quality schools which enable them as mothers to understand public health messages in the mass media and to navigate bureaucratic health services effectively reducing risks to their children's health With the acquisition of academic literacy their health literacy and health navigation skills are enhanced thereby reducing risks to children and altering interactions between mother and child Assessments of these maternal skills in four diverse countries Mexico Nepal Venezuela and Zambia support this model and are presented in the book Chapter 1 provides a brief history of mass schooling including the development of a bureaucratic Western form of schooling Along with the bureaucratic organization of healthcare services and other institutions this form of mass schooling spread across the globe setting new standards for effective communication standards that are in effect taught in school Chapter 2 reviews the demographic and epidemiological evidence concerning the effects of mothers education on survival health and fertility In this chapter the authors propose a model that shows how women s schooling together with urbanization and changes in income and social status reduce child mortality and improve health In Chapter 3 the authors examine the concept of literacy and discuss how its meanings and measurements have been changed by educational research of the last few decades Chapter 4 introduces the four country study of maternal literacy Chapters 5 6 and 7 present the findings focusing on academic literacy and its retention Chapter 5 its impact on maternal health literacy and navigation skills Chapter 6 and changes in mother child interaction and child literacy skills Chapter 7 Chapter 8 presents a new analysis of school experience explores policy implications and recommends further research International Handbook of Population Policies John F. Population and Progress in a Yoruba Town Elisha P. Renne, 2003 This study of local perceptions of population and development in a rural southwestern Nigerian town questions some of the underlying assumptions of the demographic theory of fertility transition Fertility transition theory and modernisation theory from which it derives have not explained why fertility remains high particularly in sub Saharan Africa despite the presence of some conditions associated with its decline in Western societies nor why development despite a plethora of projects has failed to take off As this study demonstrates neither fertility change nor development follows a universal trajectory Whether lower fertility or Western models of development are viewed as possible or advantageous reflects cultural ideas about proper social relations as well as political and economic conditions which may hinder or facilitate these changes Key Features Its example of grass roots development complements economic development textsProvides an ethnographic study of fertility changeExamines the historical processes of social change in the context of Nigeria under military rule Reproduction and Social Context in Sub-Saharan Africa Samuel Agyei-Mensah, John B. Casterline, 2003-06-30 Perhaps no region matches sub Saharan Africa in its social and cultural diversity In this collection of micro demographic studies the authors examine how the diversity of this region influences reproductive behavior The empirical studies distributed throughout the continent are localized in depth studies that give special attention to contextual effects of social structure and social organization A diverse range of topics is addressed including adolescent sexuality and the effects of early childbearing on later fertility the impact of development programs on fertility and the association between social organization social diffusion and reproductive regime Highly revealing of the determinants of reproduction in Africa these studies serve as a model for a new mode of demographic research The chapters are arranged by geographical regions of the continent with an introductory chapter outlining the editors vision of a micro demographic enterprise and a concluding chapter placing the African fertility transition in the context of the global fertility transition This volume inspires fresh thinking and theorizing about demographic change not only in sub Saharan Africa but also in all low income settings Economic Policy Options for a Prosperous Nigeria Paul Collier, C.
