

Critical Thinking Cheat Sheet

2 PARTS OF CRITICAL THINKING IN NURSING:

#1: Connecting the dots with everything you're learning

- You need to be able to compare and contrast information (med-surg disorders and other things you're learning), and understand how they fit together and impact the patient.

#2: Planning ahead

- You need to plan ahead with everything that you do. Make sure you have the right supplies with you, that you're doing the correct intervention or giving the correct medication, or are following the correct plan of care (you didn't get your patient's mixed up!)

9 CRITICAL THINKING QUESTIONS

- What do I need to assess and look for with this disorder?
  - Including lab values and signs and symptoms
- How does this disorder impact a patient without comorbidities?
  - This is the only health concern, disorder or disease they have.
- How does this disorder impact a patient with comorbidities?
  - They have ANOTHER health concern, disease or disorder at the same time
- What interventions are most likely to be ordered by the doctor?
  - Including medications and lab draws
- What interventions are within my scope of practice as a nurse to do without an order?
  - Example: position changes and patient education
- How do these interventions impact a patient without comorbidities?
- How do these interventions impact a patient with co-morbidities?
- What patient and family education needs to occur?
- And what other disorders or problems are commonly associated with this disorder?
