Snowdon, Martine Hausberger, 1997-03-20 For at least 30 years there have been close parallels between studies of birdsong development and those of the development of human language Both song and language require species specific stimulation at a sensitive period in development and subsequent practice through subsong and plastic song in birds and babbling in infant humans leading to the development of characteristic vocalisations for each species This book illustrates how social interactions during development can shape vocal learning and extend the sensitive period beyond infancy and how social companions can induce flexibility even into adulthood Social companions in a wide range of species including birds and humans but also cetaceans and nonhuman primates play important roles in shaping vocal production as well as the comprehension and appropriate usage of vocal communication This book will be required reading for students and researchers interested in animal and human communication and its development Frontiers in Visual Science Steven J. Cool, Earl L. Smith, 2013-06-05 The papers included in this volume were presented as a part of the dedication of a new clinical teaching research facility for the University of Houston College of Optometry March 27-31 1977 These papers were intended to cover the state of the art knowledge in all areas of visual system investigation While we may not have quite reached our goal of covering all areas the papers presented here cover a broad cross section of investigations in vision However without doubt the intention of state of the art coverage was achieved in all areas discussed From the beginning with the presentation of Nobel Laureate Ragnar Granit to the end with consideration of Vision Health Care Delivery Systems each speaker was thorough in treatment of his/her subject From studies of the eye and of contact lenses through examination of crystalline lens function ocular pathologies and retina function the eye is very thoroughly considered Much of this volume covers material dealing with the process of vision after coding of information in the eye Psychophysical studies of vision compare and contrast with neurophysiological studies of visual function and a very thorough section on the development of visual system function should prove valuable to a wide cross section of teachers researchers and clinicians All in all the contents of this volume represent a vast array of knowledge about the visual system and this should be a valuable teaching research resource for many years The American Annual Cyclopedia and Register of Important Events of the Year ... ,1884
