Critical Acts Latin American Women And Cultural Criticism:

Critical Acts Elizabeth A. Marchant, 1999 A clear well written and cogent study of three major women intellectuals and their positions as creative writers and cultural critics in Latin America Francine Masiello University of California Berkeley Insightful and often brilliant especially important in countering the traditional thought that posits the notion that women did not engage in the production of culture and knowledge in 20th century Latin America Susan C Quinlan University of Georgia Moving deftly across the gap between Portuguese and Spanish speaking Latin America Elizabeth Marchant examines the writing of three important women intellectuals of the early 20th century Lúcia Miguel Pereira Brazil Victoria Ocampo Argentina and Gabriela Mistral Chile Though Marchant acknowledges the persistence of the bearded academy referring to the male dominated nature of literary institutions she challenges the assumption that women did not engage in the production of culture and knowledge in modern Latin America Looking at the broad contexts in which the three authors wrote she explores their views on race culture gender and national identity bringing into focus women's impact on the writing of the history of ideas in Latin America as well as their traditional influence as writers of personal themes She also examines the neglected study of the critical essay as a genre Solidly grounded in feminist theory cultural criticism and social history this book offers important ground breaking perspectives on the issue of gender criticism and the study of Third World women writers Elizabeth A Marchant is assistant professor of Spanish and Portuguese at the University of California Los Angeles She has written articles on contemporary Afro Brazilian literature and cultural studies

Latin American and Iberian Perspectives on Literature and Medicine Patricia Novillo-Corvalán, 2015-06-05 This is the first study to examine the representation of illness disability and cultural pathologies in modern and contemporary Iberian and Latin American literature Innovative and interdisciplinary the collection situates medicine as an important and largely overlooked discourse in these literatures while also considering the social political religious symbolic and metaphysical dimensions underpinning illness Investigating how Hispanic and Lusophone writers have reflected on the personal and cultural effects of illness it raises central questions about how medical discourses cultural pathologies and the art of healing in general are represented Essays pay particular attention to the ways in which these interdisciplinary dialogues chart new directions in the study of Hispanic and Lusophone cultures and emerging disciplines such as the medical humanities Addressing a wide range of themes and subjects including bioethics neuroscience psychosurgery medical technologies Darwinian evolution indigenous herbal medicine the rising genre of the pathography and the illness as metaphor trope the collection engages with the discourses of cultural studies gender studies disability studies comparative literature and the medical humanities This book enriches and stimulates scholarship in these areas by showing how much we still have to gain from interdisciplinary studies working at the intersections between the humanities and the sciences
