Weekly News Letter to Crop Correspondents, 1913      Weekly News Letter to Crop Correspondents United States. Department of Agriculture, 1914      Iron Nutrition in Plants and Rhizospheric Microorganisms Larry L. Barton, Javier Abadia, 2006-07-25 Animals including humans are highly dependent on plants to provide many different nutrients including iron in a useable form Additionally plants are used to support the growth of animals and obtaining high crop yields via optimal plant growth is an economic necessity Thus it is crucial to understand the role of iron in plant nutrition This book provides comprehensive reviews on topics of plant iron nutrition that are being addressed by different laboratories around the world As one can see the area of plant iron nutrition is highly interdisciplinary involving scientists of various fields of knowledge Plant biologists are needed to characterize iron translocation throughout the plant following root iron uptake and to examine the regulation of iron stimulated activities that influence crop yield and quality Plant geneticists are contributing to the area of plant iron nutrition by developing model systems to aid our understanding of the complex activities of the individual plant Soil chemists are examining the interactions between iron and various minerals and organic matter soil components in the root zone Microbiologists are providing a crucial perspective on how the interactions between the plant and soil microorganisms are important in plant iron nutrition Additionally the cycling of iron in the terrestrial environment is being examined by ecologists and related scientists While it may be ideal to systematically examine iron nutrition in a single plant species research is influenced by local or regional requirements      Modern Steel-clad Corn Crib Tennessee Coal, Iron, and Railroad Company, 1955      Control of Iron Chlorosis in Ornamental and Crop Plants Richard T. Koenig, 1996      Iron Nutrition and Interactions in Plants Yona Chen, Y. Hadar, 1991-03-31 Many agricultural crops worldwide especially in semi arid climates suffer from iron deficiencies Among plants sensitive to iron deficiency are apples avocado bananas barley beans citrus cotton grapes peanuts pecans potatoes sorghum soybeans and numerous ornamental plants Deficiencies are usually recognized by chlorotic in new leaves and are typically found among sensitive crops grown in calcareous or yellowed interveinal areas soils which cover over 30% of the earth's land surface Iron deficiency may lead in extreme cases to complete crop failure In intensive agriculture on calcareous soils iron often becomes a major limiting nutrient for optimal crop production thus correction of iron deficiency is required Various chemicals and practices are available They are however costly and do not always result in a complete remedy of the deficiency Crucial questions relative to the cost benefit equation such as the recovery rate of plants and the long term fertilizing effect have not yet been resolved The complexity of iron nutrition problems requires an understanding of the chemistry of iron oxides in soils of the chemistry of both natural and synthetic chelates of rhizosphere microbiology and biochemistry and of the physiological involvement of the plant in iron uptake and transport      Strategies for Iron Biofortification of Crop Plants Mara Schuler, 2012 Strategies for Iron Biofortification of Crop Plants      Effect of crop size on leaf iron content and shoot
