

Prevalence of anxiety and its correlates among older adults in Latin America, India and China: cross-cultural study

A. Matthew Prina, Cleusa P. Ferri, Mariella Guerra, Carol Brayne and Martin Prince

Background

Anxiety is a common mental disorder among older people who live in the Western world, yet little is known about its prevalence in low- and middle-income countries.

Aims

We investigated the prevalence of anxiety and its correlates among older adults in low- and middle-income countries with diverse cultures.

Method

Cross-sectional surveys of all residents aged 65 or over ($n = 15\,021$) in 11 catchment sites in 7 countries (China, India, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Venezuela, Mexico and Peru) were carried out as part of the 10/66 collaboration. Anxiety was measured by using the Geriatric Mental State Examination (GMSE) and the Automated Geriatric Examination for Computer Assisted Taxonomy (AGECAT) diagnostic algorithm.

Results

The age- and gender-standardised prevalence of anxiety varied greatly across sites, ranging from 0.1% (95% CI 0.0–0.3) in rural China to 9.6% (95% CI 8.2–12.1) in urban Peru. Urban centres had higher estimates of anxiety than their rural counterparts with adjusted (age, gender and site) odds ratios of 2.9 (95% CI 1.7–5.3). Age, gender, socioeconomic status and comorbid physical illnesses were all associated with a GMSE/AGECAT diagnosis of anxiety, and so was disability (World Health Organization Disability Assessment Schedule 10).

Conclusions

Anxiety is common in Latin America. Estimates from this region are similar to the ones from high-income European countries found in the literature. As demographic change will occur more rapidly in these countries, further research exploring the mental health of older people in developing areas is vital, with the inclusion of other specific anxiety disorders, along with evidence for strategies for supporting those with these disorders.

Declaration of interest

The 10/66 Dementia Research Group works closely with Alzheimer's Disease International, the non-profit federation of 77 Alzheimer associations around the world. Alzheimer's Disease International is supported in part by grants from GlaxoSmithKline, Novartis, Lundbeck, Pfizer and Eisai.

Little is known about the epidemiology of anxiety among older adults living in low- and middle-income countries. This disorder, which can substantially impair quality of life¹ and has also been associated with increased risk of mortality^{2,3} and disability,⁴ is thought to decrease with age⁵ but it still common among older people living in high-income countries.⁶ It is not known whether similar patterns occur across the world. A recent systematic review of anxiety⁷ in later life only reported studies conducted in high-income countries, and we are aware of only a handful of studies that estimated the prevalence of anxiety outside those settings.^{7–10} The 10/66 study provides an opportunity to estimate anxiety in diverse settings but using a standardised and validated methodology. We also aimed to investigate sociodemographic factors and health statuses associated with both clinical and subclinical anxiety and the impact that this condition has on disability. We anticipated finding a lower prevalence of anxiety in low- and middle-income countries but expected it to be as disabling as it is in high-income countries.

Method

Study design

Cross-sectional surveys of all residents aged 65 or over ($n = 15\,021$) in 11 catchment areas in 7 countries (China, India, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Venezuela, Mexico and Peru) were carried out as part of the baseline phase of the 10/66 Dementia Research Group's population-based programme. The full protocol has been published elsewhere.¹¹ Catchment area sites were selected purposively with a view to identifying typical central urban high density, and predominately low socioeconomic status districts in national or state capital cities (Beijing in China, Chennai in India, Havana and neighbouring Matanzas in Cuba, Santo Domingo in Dominican Republic, Caracas in Venezuela, Mexico City in Mexico and Lima in Peru) and contrasting rural areas, with a traditional agrarian lifestyle and low-density population in the four countries where this was feasible (villages around Vellore in India, Daxing in China, Morelos state in Mexico, and Casete in Peru). The boundaries of each catchment area were precisely defined, and households mapped. Each household was then systematically door-knocked to identify all those aged 65 years and over, who were then considered eligible for participation in the survey. The response rate was excellent in most centres and ranged from 72 to 98% (average 86%). After the consent was taken the full assessment, lasting 2–3 h, was carried out. This included a physical examination, a blood test and the informant and participant interviews. Ethical approval was sought and received from the King's College London ethics committee and by local ethics committees.

Interviews and measurements

The interviews, translated into the different languages, lasted around 2–3 h and collected data necessary for: mental disorders diagnoses (including dementia, depression and anxiety); measurement of comorbid physical illnesses, sociodemographics, risk factors

Topics in Culture Learning, 1977 Individual Differences in Children and Adolescents Donald H. Saklofske, Sybil B. G. Eysenck, This uniquely authoritative collection of original papers with contributions from over twenty countries provides a rare insight into research and applied programs in the study of individual differences in children and adolescents worldwide While delinquency proves to be one of the most common areas of interest a wide range of cognitive personality and social characteristics are examined and the use of the Eysenck Personality Questionnaire in many studies allows uniform comparisons to be made between countries The editors have not only overcome the language barriers which hitherto have made such information virtually inaccessible to the English speaking world They have also succeeded in bringing together studies from developed and developing countries East and West to present a global picture of adolescent and child psychology In particular the book highlights the general and specific cultural influences on child development and adolescent psychology in different countries and reflects the social and research concerns of the countries and cultures represented The authors comprise a cross section of professionals in the social and behavioral sciences working in university and clinical settings While North America is well represented by six chapters including Puerto Rico as is Europe particular efforts were made to obtain contributions from Eastern Europe Asia and Africa At the time this book was developed information exchange with eastern European countries was most difficult It is very exciting to present chapters from Hungary Lithuania Romania Russia and Yugoslavia The inclusion of articles from Japan Korea Singapore Sri Lanka and Uganda also add another dimension to studies of individual differences in children Contributions from Australia Israel and New Zealand also allow the book to take on much more of an international perspective on topics ranging from delinquency fears and motivation to intelligence personality and assessment issues This volume provides a plethora of international perspectives on the study of children It will be essential to sociologists psychologists educators and child study specialists
