Internet Resources on Women Joan Smolin Korenman,1997 This manual has been written primarily for internet novices and for people already familiar with online communications who want to learn more about the growing array of electronic resources pertaining to Women's Studies and to transforming the curriculum so that it better reflects women's experience, accomplishments, and perspectives. Chapter 1 introduces e-mail, its uses, and e-mail addresses. Chapter 2 looks at e-mail lists and electronic discussion forums and explains how to find lists, how to participate in discussion forums, and how they can be used in curriculum transformation. Chapter 3 describes the World Wide Web and its uses, as well as related topics like telnet, ftp, gopher, search engines, and web browsers. Chapter 4 offers specific guidance about where to find online information about women, especially materials useful for curriculum transformation. Chapter 5 is on how to gain access to the Internet, and the final chapter lists additional sources of information.

DB     Health Sue V. Rosser, 1997 This essay examines the ways in which health as a discipline has been influenced by feminist scholarship in the field. It explains that feminist scientists in the field have recognized and sought to address gender bias in traditional approaches to health research, including the androcentric bias in defining priorities for medical research, the lack of funding for clinical research on women, failure to recognize the effects of gender and interactions between gender, ethnicity, and class in research. There is growing evidence to support the assertion that access to health care differs in accordance with gender, race, class, and age, and excessive focus on male research subjects and the definition of some diseases as male diseases has led to the underdiagnosis and undertreatment of these diseases in older women. It also notes that the exclusion of women of color and lesbians and their health care needs from clinical research has often resulted in inadequate or inappropriate theories and conclusions being drawn from the data. Contains 110 references.

MDM     Education Madeleine R. Grumet, Kate McCoy, 1997 This essay examines the ways in which education as a discipline has been influenced by feminist scholarship in the field. It explains that foundational studies by feminist scholars have examined sexual differences in identity and ways of knowing and have challenged the arrogation of feminine experience and viewpoints to generalizations of male experience. The essay goes on to look at the education curriculum, focusing on access and equity, pedagogy and narrative, and identity, noting that autobiographical writing has become an important process in teacher education. It notes that feminist scholars have challenged traditional research paradigms of researcher researched, knower known, and subject object and have questioned the boundaries that separate public from private by insisting on the political nature of all inquiry. Many of the issues embroiling public education, reading instruction in the early grades, the role of parents in determining curriculum, single sex schools, and the power of teachers in relation to administrators, legislators, and parents are addressed in the thought research and teaching of feminist scholars. Contains 70 references.

MDM     Economics Julie A. Nelson, 1997 This essay examines the ways in which economics as a discipline has been influenced by feminist scholarship in the field. It explains that feminist work in transforming economics began to gain ground only in the early 1990s and that the impact of feminist or multicultural insights on the core research assumptions of the discipline has been minor. The essay notes that economics differs from most other social sciences in that it is built around a single, highly influential core paradigm. The mainstream of economics is built around the neoclassical model.

of human behavior which assumes that all activity is a result of rational self interested choices by autonomous individuals Feminists have challenged all of the underpinnings of this model along with traditional teaching and research methods A less gender biased discipline would use characteristics associated with both sides of the old dualistic thinking about gender such as reason versus emotion and self interested versus other interested to analyze the behavior of both men and women The document includes an annotated bibliography and a list of related electronic resources MDM Women's Information Directory, 1992 Shawn Brennan, 1993-12-31 The Women's Information Directory WID is a comprehensive guide to resources for and about women in the United States WID provides current detailed information on a wide range of print and live resources The First Ladies Margaret Brown Klapthor, 1995 Brief biographies and portraits of wives sisters daughters nieces and other relatives of Presidents who have served as White House hostesses from Martha Washington to Hillary Clinton Feminist Collections University of Wisconsin System.
