International Round Table on Audiovisual Records

The following report was submitted by Ms Catherine Pinion, Chairman of the IFLA Round Table on Audiovisual Media.

Background

This Round Table brings together a number of Unesco non-governmental organizations, all international and all dealing with the collection and use of non-book materials. IFLA was instrumental in establishing this group in the early '80s, the first exploratory meeting taking place during the Leipzig Conference in 1981, when representatives from the International Council on Archives (ICA), the International Association of Sound Archives (IASA) and IFLA spoke of the benefits likely to result from closer co-operation on "matters of mutual concern".

The first meeting took place in Paris in March 1982, with Guust van Wesemael and Ed Spruit (then Secretary of the IFLA Round Table on Audiovisual Media) attending for IFLA. Other member organizations were the International Federation of Film Archives (FIAF), the International Federation of Television Archives (FIAT), the International Association of Sound Archives (IASA), the International Film and Television Council (IFTTC), the International Council on Archives' Audiovisual Committee (ICA/CAV) and Unesco. Each group was invited to send two representatives. Since then, the group has changed only slightly. Over the years, and because of the specific interests of most member organizations, it became clear that archival concerns – especially problems relating to safeguarding the "non-book" cultural heritage – would dominate the discussions and activities of the Round Table. Consequently, because IFTTC's activities are directed more towards the staging of film festivals, their membership ceased in 1988.

Because of the informal nature of the group, practical arrangements for meetings are shared. There is no Secretariat, so each organization takes its turn to act as "Rapporteur and Secretary" for the annual meeting, then to host and chair the meeting during the following year. This means that the administrative workload is divided between groups, and also members have the opportunity to visit different countries and see a variety of operations. There may be other smaller meetings to further specific aspects of the work, but these are organized according to the convenience of the members participating. Unesco's presence at the main annual meeting, however, is much valued and extremely important, as it enables the NGO Round Table to discuss its future plans and projects with Unesco, and for Unesco to liaise more closely with the NGOs concerning projects and missions funded from Paris.

Interests and Activities

The archival aspect has inevitably dominated discussions. For the main archive organizations, the problems of saving a programme before it decomposes or catches fire or simply fades away completely is of paramount importance. For IFLA, this concern is likewise shared, because of the influence of audiovisual
