This collection of contemporary clinically oriented papers covers a range of theoretical approaches to the fundamentally important technical issue of interpretation. It offers thought provoking cross cultural clinical perspectives about interpretation with illustrations from cutting edge clinical practice with couples and families. Divided into three sections the first part of the book examines interpretation within the broader field of psychoanalysis and notes how it has been applied to couple and family psychoanalysis. Part II considers the current use of interpretation with couples including how it informs assessment while Part III focuses on its application with families and considers a broad range of key topics including the nature of family social and intergenerational links the arrival of a newborn same sex couples families bereavement in a family and families with adolescent children. Each chapter includes a lively discussion piece.

Interpretation in Couple and Family Psychoanalysis: Cross Cultural Perspectives represents a major contribution to the field of couple and family psychoanalysis. It reflects the fruits of an unparalleled era of global collaboration and the resultant re shaping of approaches to clinical practice with couples and families. Mental health professionals dealing with couples and families will find it to have immediate relevance to their clinical work either in their institutional or private practice.

Cross-Cultural Family Research and Practice W. Kim Halford, Fons Van De Vijver, 2020-08-12

Cross Cultural Family Research and Practice broadens the theoretical and clinical perspectives on couple and family cross cultural research with insights from a diverse set of disciplines including psychology sociology communications economics and more. Examining topics such as family migration acculturation and implications for clinical intervention the book starts by providing an overarching conceptual framework then moves into a comparison of countries and cultures with an overview of cross cultural studies of the family across nations from a range of specific disciplinary perspectives. Other sections focus on acculturation migrating migrated families and their descendants and clinical practice with culturally diverse families. Studies cultural influences in couple and family relationships. Features a broadly interdisciplinary perspective. Looks at how cultural differences affect how families are structured and function. Explores why certain immigrant groups adapt better to new countries than others. Discusses why certain countries are better at integrating immigrants than others.

Cross-Cultural Practice Sharon-Ann Gopaul-McNicol, Janet Brice-Baker, 1998

Developed primarily in the consulting rooms and universities of Europe and North America traditional forms of psychological assessment and treatment are not up to the task of dealing with today's culturally diverse patients. In an increasingly multicultural society where basic terms such as normality and family can have radically varying definitions it is not unusual for well meaning clinicians to inadvertently misclassify unfamiliar behaviors or beliefs as abnormal or pathological. Ultimately the solution lies in educational reform. In the meantime a major first step toward ensuring that ethnically different patients receive quality mental health services is the adoption of culturally sensitive assessment and intervention models such as those described in this pathbreaking book. The culmination of its authors many years of experience in working with culturally diverse patients this timely guide arms practitioners with an array of innovative yet clinically grounded approaches to psychological assessment intervention and training With the help of numerous case examples drawn from their work with Asian Caribbean African American and Hispanic clients Drs Gopaul McNicol and Brice Baker illustrate a four step approach that entails assessing problems within their familial and sociocultural contexts and then tailoring interventions that take full advantage of the religious social educational familial and legal institutions that shape an individual s experiences and beliefs The authors begin with a trenchant critique of traditional mental health training in which they expose built in cultural and historical biases that effectively hobble a trainee s ability to think multiculturally They next explore a range of assessment issues describe clinically validated techniques for treating culturally diverse children parents and couples and outline best practices in report writing for linguistically and culturally diverse clients In their discussion of clinical issues that arise when dealing with culturally diverse families they detail a proven Multicultural Multimodal Multisystems Multi CMS approach to intervention Returning to the topic of education in the final section they outline the major competencies needed to develop a trainee s multicultural skills and offer valuable training suggestions for professors and clinical supervisors Describing a dynamic new approach to cross cultural assessment and treatment Cross Cultural Practice is valuable reading for both professionals and students in mental health A dynamic new approach to cross cultural assessment and treatment The Global Village presaged by Marshall McLuhan in the 1960s has arrived with a vengeance For many mental health professionals this brings with it the daunting challenge of working with patients with a vast array of beliefs values customs and behaviors This groundbreaking book helps clinicians meet the challenge of assessing and treating diverse clients by arming them with a bold new multicultural approach Using numerous case examples drawn from their years of practice with Asian Caribbean African American and Hispanic clients the authors Describe proven techniques for assessing culturally diverse children parents and couples Develop a proven Multicultural Multimodal Multi systems Multi CMS approach to intervention Expose the cultural biases at the core of conventional mental health training Outline the major competencies needed to develop a trainee s multicultural skills and develop alternative approaches to clinical training
