Direct from Nature Janice Tolhurst Driesbach, Thomas Hill, William H. Gerdts, 1997 In his time Thomas Hill a British born painter who worked extensively in the American West during the second half of the nineteenth century earned favorable comparison with Albert Bierstadt in the East Coast press and received highest honors for landscape painting at the Philadelphia Centennial By the late 1860s his monumental canvases of Yosemite commanded five thousand dollars apiece and attracted national critical acclaim Hill is generally associated with those paintings of Yosemite and other grand landscapes and his The Driving of the Last Spike These large scale compositions however incompletely represent Thomas Hill's talents and enthusiasms Some of the artist's finest achievements are realized in smaller paintings classified as oil sketches of subjects as diverse as Newport Rhode Island Lake Tahoe in California and the Pacific Northwest These modest works attest to Hill's powers of observation his abilities to render immediate descriptions of his subjects and his enchantment with his motifs Oil sketches usually made on board or paper and under sixteen by twenty inches comprise a significant portion of Thomas Hill's work Spontaneously executed they capture the artist's direct responses to nature As a body they offer immediacy and visual delight as well as insights into the artist's broad interests and the cultural context in which he worked And because they represent in many cases the only surveying evidence of larger scale paintings made from them the oil sketches are key to documenting Hill's career excerpted from the essay by Janice T Driesbach from front cover flap Thomas Moran REV Nancy K Anderson, Acpe Supervisor, Nancy K.
