Disability And Psychology Critical Introductions And Reflections:

Disability and Psychology Dan Goodley, Rebecca Lawthom, 2005-10-30 Disability is not just the physical sensory or intellectual impairments a person has but the exclusion from society they face as a result Organisations for disabled people are a growing voice in challenging this exclusion and anti discrimination legislation is helping to change the structures in society that have contributed to it This book examines the discipline of psychology in this regard It argues that psychology has tended to ignore the socio cultural aspects of disability and treat disabled people as objects rather than arbiters of psychological intervention Bringing together disabled and non disabled researchers and psychologists this book proposes ideas for an enabling psychological theory and practice and addresses questions such as How can we support the inclusion of disabled children Can therapy enable rather than pathologise What can be learnt from the experience of disabled psychologists How can psychology contribute to social models of disability In examining these issues this volume challenges the reader to reconsider the relationship between disability studies and psychology and to do so in ways that contribute to the emancipation rather than the exclusion of disabled people A key text for students on relevant courses within disability studies and psychology degrees this book is also an important resource for those who study or work in the areas of healthcare studies nursing sociology and social work Dan Goodley is a Reader in disability studies University of Sheffield with research interests in disability theory activism and methodology Rebecca Lawthom is Principal Lecturer in psychology Manchester Metropolitan University and a member of the Research Institute for Health and Social Change Her research interests are in disability community and feminist psychology

Hogan,2022-11-29 A historical look at how activists influenced the adoption of more positive inclusive and sociopolitical views of disability Disability activism has fundamentally changed American society for the better and along with it the views and practices of many clinical professionals After 1945 disability self advocates and family advocates pushed for the inclusion of more positive inclusive and sociopolitical perspectives on disability in clinical research training and practice In Disability Dialogues Andrew J Hogan highlights the contributions of disabled people along with their family members and other allies in changing clinical understandings and approaches to disability Hogan examines the evolving medical social and political engagement of three postwar professions clinical psychology pediatrics and genetic counseling with disability and disability related advocacy Professionals in these fields historically resisted adopting a more inclusive and accepting perspective on people with disabilities primarily due to concerns about professional role identity and prestige In response to the work of disability activists however these attitudes gradually began to change Disability Dialogues provides an important contribution to historical sociological and bioethical accounts of disability and clinical professionalization Moving beyond advocacy alone Hogan makes the case for why present day clinical professional fields need to better recruit and support disabled practitioners Disabled clinicians are uniquely positioned to combine biomedical expertise with their lived experiences of disability and encourage greater tolerance for disabilities among their colleagues students and institutions The Psychologist ,2006 Disability & the Politics of Education Susan Lynn Gabel,Scot Danforth,2008 Disability and the Politics of Education An International Reader is a rich resource that deals comprehensively with the many aspects of the complex topic of disability studies in education For nearly two decades global attention has been given to education as a human right through global initiatives such as Education for All EFA and the Salamanca Statement Yet according to UNESCO reaching the goals of EFA remains one of the most daunting challenges facing the global community Today millions of the world s disabled children cannot obtain a basic childhood education particularly in countries with limited resources Even in the wealthiest countries many disabled children and youth are educationally segregated from the nondisabled particularly if they are labeled with significant cognitive impairment International agencies such as the United Nations and the World Bank have generated funds for educational development but unfortunately these funds are administered with the assumption that west is best thereby urging developing countries to mimic educational policies in the United States and the United Kingdom in order to prove their aid worthiness This McDonaldization of education reproduces the labeling resource allocation and social dynamics long criticized in disability studies The authors in this volume explore these subjects and other complexities of disability and the politics of education In doing so they demonstrate the importance and usefulness of international perspectives and comparative approaches
